KING'S POLICE MEDAL.

NOTIFICATION.

(POLICE.)

Delhi, the 1st January 1920

No. 5.—His Majesty the KING, EMPEROR OF INDIA, has been pleased to confer the King's Police Medal on the following officers and men of the Indian Police establishments:—

Name of officer and rank.	Statement of services for which in particular the decoration has been conferred.
	MADRAS.
1 Norman Elliot Quinton Mainwaring, Deputy Inspector-General of Police.	Mr. Mainwaring has a fine record of long and valuable service. He was till recently in the Central Range where he served as District Superintendent and Deputy Inspector-General for over twenty years and where his knowledge of the country and people have been invaluable. By his energy and long experience he gave material help in establishing the recently started police school at Anantapur. He is of the greatest help to the officers under him and in many cases improves their work, through his thorough knowledge of it and his fine straightforward character.
2 Alwarappa Pillai Sadagopa Pillai, Sub-Inspector of Police.	On September 17th, 1918, this officer, then a head constable who was about to leave Kamudi on duty, heard that a riot was taking place in the village. He went to the station and learnt that a party of police had been severely wounded and had fallen into the hands of the rioters. He collected a handful of police and proceeding to the scene of action found that the rioters had set fire to some houses and were looting. He ordered his men to fire but as there was no result he himself fired. His aim was accurate and his action drove the rioters completely away. He deserves the greatest credit for having overcome the usual fear of the subordinate to take responsibility for firing and there is no doubt that his promptness and courage saved the situation. Hesitation to fire had, before his arrival, caused the death of a head constable and constable and severe injuries to other constables.
3 Oliver Ethelbert Windle, Superintendent of Police.	During the recent Mappilla outbreak in the South Malabar district, Mr. Windle handled his men with great skill and courage and it was owing to this and the excellent transport arrangements which he made that the outbreak was so promptly suppressed. His arrangements for motors and reinforcements and the manner in which he ordered the attack were responsible for this being the most promptly and effectively suppressed outbreak on record.

Name of officer and rank.	Statement of services for which in particular the decoration has been conferred.

4 Pasupuleti Parankusam Nayudu, Diwan Bahadur, Deputy Commissioner of Police, Madras City.	On September 8th, 1918, Mr. Parankusam Nayudu rendered most valuable services in preventing looting in various parts of Madras and on one occasion, practically single-handed, attacked a band of looters who were drunk and offered resistance. Though pelted with stones and broken bottles, he stood his ground and effected the arrest of several ringleaders. The following day he was again active in suppressing rioting and subsequently he displayed the greatest activity in restoring order and confidence and in arranging for the supply of rice. Throughout he displayed marked courage, ability and devotion to duty and the Governor in Council has placed on record an appreciation of his services. This officer has also a good record of long and valuable service and is on the eve of retirement.
5 Harold Ernest Williams, Superintendent of Police.	Prior to his going on leave Mr. Williams was for six years Personal Assistant to the Deputy Inspector-General of Police, Railways and Criminal Investigation Department, and worked most ably and conscientiously. His work in this difficult and responsible appointment has for many years been of a particularly high order and he stuck to his post in spite of much ill-health till the conclusion of the war.
6 Syed Abdur Rahim Sahib, Inspector of Police.	This officer enlisted as a constable and has, by his ability and continued work, risen to his present rank. All officers under whom he has served have held the highest opinion of his honesty, reliability and detective skill. He has taken a very prominent part in the detection of many important and difficult cases and, in spite of his age and long service, continues to take an active interest in, and deal successfully with, crime occurring in his circle.

BOMBAY.

7 Arthur Charles John Bailey, Superintendent of Police.	This officer did exceptionally well in dealing with an incipient rising among a criminal tribe of the Kaira District in August 1918. He took successful measures to prevent dacoities and other serious crime from spreading. He accomplished the pacification of the affected tracts under very difficult circumstances and it was due to his personal ability and zeal that the district was kept generally quiet.
8 Mahomed Hussain Shah, son of Syed Sujayat Ali Shah, Inspector of Police in Sind.	This officer joined the Police Service on the 9th August 1907 as Head Constable, 1st Grade, on Rs. 20. He was promoted to the grade of Sub-Inspector on the 1st May 1908 and promoted again to that of Inspector on the 13th March 1919. During his service of 11 years and 8 months he has received in all 37 rewards for good detective work in dacoities, robberies and murders, etc. During 1918 shortly after the Marri-Khetran trouble on the frontier, this officer worked with energy, fearlessness and ability at great personal risk in arresting and successfully prosecuting the local and trans-frontier badmashes and the members of the gang of the notorious murderer and outlaw Mahomed Khan Burdi who was eventually shot dead in an encounter with the Police of the Upper Sind Frontier District.

9 Llewellyn Charles Francis O'Brien, Inspector, Bombay City Police.	This officer joined the Bombay City Police as a Sub-Inspector in May 1905. He rose to the Deputy Inspector's grade in 1910 and became Inspector in 1915. He has earned no fewer than 17 commendatory entries and rewards for good work and his conduct throughout his service has been exemplary. During the past few years he has held charge of one of the most difficult and criminal charges in the City of Bombay. His administration of this section has been deserving of the highest praise. By devoting the closest personal attention to his work, he obtained an insight into his charge such as is rarely achieved by a European Police Officer, with the result that his efforts met with a remarkable meed of success. He was personally responsible for the investigation and successful prosecution of the Duncan Road Cross Lane murder case in 1917, in which a prostitute was murdered in the most revolting circumstances by a Pathan brothel keeper, his wife and daughter. The case attracted the widest attention in the City and led to vigorous action which has resulted in ameliorating the lot of Indian prostitutes. In view of his success as an investigation officer, Inspector O'Brien has now been transferred to the Criminal Investigation Department and has been placed in charge of the Crimes Branch of that Department.
10 Charles Robert Jeffereis, Inspector, Bombay City Police.	This officer joined the Bombay Police Force as a 3rd grade Constable in 1902, rising in ten years to the rank of Inspector. His services were then transferred to the City Criminal Investigation Department where for four years he was in charge of the confidential records, earning the Commissioner's praise for his work during the heavy rush in the early stages of the war. His record contains 19 commendatory entries and his conduct throughout his service has been exemplary. He has received monetary rewards in several cases which gave proof of his capacity and detective ability. He has made a special study of the European criminal of India and his skill in handling such cases has been of the greatest value to the Criminal Investigation Department. For the past two and a half years Inspector Jeffereis has been on special duty under Captain Judge, an officer on special duty under the Director of Central Intelligence. Captain Judge speaks in the highest terms of his work which he describes as having been of a very high order, performed with extraordinary tact and resourcefulness. His labours in connection with this special duty have resulted in enormous savings to Government by the exposure of frauds connected with Army contracts.
11 Jiwa Pirbhai, 2nd grade Head Constable, Agency Police, Kathiawar.	He has shown personal bravery in support of public authority during an attempt by prisoners to escape from the Rajkot State Jail on the 1st and 2nd December 1916. He was detailed for duty in front of the main gate of the jail and was but poorly protected by the trunk of a young nimb tree from the fire of the convicts. By his steady concentrated fire on the main gate of the jail from 11 P.M. on the 1st of December to about 3 A.M. on the 2nd December 1916, the convicts were prevented from rushing the gate and making a dash for freedom under cover of darkness. The trunk of the nimb tree from behind which the head constable kept up his steady fire was riddled with bullets.

Name of officer and rank.	Statement of services for which in particular the decoration has been conferred.

BOMBAY—concld.

12 Rupert Learoyd McCulloch, Superintendent of Police in Sind.	This officer joined the service on the 30th November 1900. From March 1904 to July 1908 he served in the Jacobabad District, Upper Sind Frontier, and made a reputation there for thoroughness and efficiency. He had considerable personal influence over the Baluchi tribesmen of the district. He has been selected for important appointments such as Personal Assistant to the Inspector General of Police and Superintendent of Police at Karachi which has a very heavy charge and the work during his time has been heavy and responsible. He was responsible for the arrangements during the visit of the Viceroy, Lord Hardinge, and again in 1917 during the visit of the present Viceroy, Lord Chelmsford. Throughout his service he has maintained a reputation for thoroughness and he has displayed marked ability in dealing with dacoity and other serious crime and has been conspicuously successful in securing good work from officers subordinate to him.

BENGAL.

13 Frank Roddis, Superintendent of Police.	This officer joined the Indian Police in the year 1897 and whilst a comparatively junior officer, was placed in charge of a heavy criminal district and was commended several times for his successful administration. Subsequently he did excellent work as Superintendent of the Assam-Bengal Railway Police In 1912 he acted for a short period as Personal Assistant to the Inspector-General of Police, Eastern Bengal and Assam, and was subsequently appointed to the charge of the East Indian Railway Police, where he maintained most friendly relations with the Railway authorities. He was appointed Personal Assistant to the Inspector-General of Police, Bengal, in 1913, in which capacity his work during the past 5 years has been of a very high order. He is a most zealous and indefatigable worker and his service throughout has been distinguished by exceptional ability and merit.
14 John Skinner Wilson, Deputy Commissioner of Police, Headquarters, Calcutta.	This officer joined the Indian Police in 1908 and did good work in Eastern Bengal during the anti-partition agitation. After the repartition, he was posted to the Intelligence Branch, Criminal Investigation Department, Bengal, where he also did good work. On the outbreak of the war he was appointed "Liaison Officer" in Calcutta and for 15 months dealt with all police questions connected with the war. In 1916 he was appointed to the Calcutta Police as Deputy Commissioner, Headquarters. He enjoys the confidence of the men under him and has done much to increase the efficiency of the Armed and Traffic Police of Calcutta. He also did excellent work in connection with the Calcutta riots of September 1918 and April 1919.
15 Seymour Hebert Hatten Mills, Assistant Superintendent of Police.	This officer displayed great courage and leadership and risked his life in dealing with some armed desperados.
16 Jamini Mohan Kar, Inspector of Police.	This officer has done exceptionally valuable work at great personal risk and displayed absolute fearlessness and devotion to duty.

Name of officer and rank.	Statement of services for which in particular the decoration has been conferred.
	BENGAL—contd.
17 Tribeni Tewari, constable.	This constable displayed great courage and risked his life in dealing with some armed desperados.
18 Abhinandan Ojha, constable.	This constable displayed great courage and risked his life in dealing with an armed desperado.
	UNITED PROVINCES.
19 Sheikh Daryao, constable, Jhansi district.	On the night of October 15, 1918, a gang of armed dacoits attacked a wealthy trader's house in Ehroura village. This constable was posted in a village a mile away; he had a musket with him; he collected some villagers and led them to Ehroura; there they, being unarmed, deserted him. Sheikh Daryao went alone into the village, approached the gang and opened fire on the members. He hit a dacoit and the remainder of the gang left the house and retreated, firing all the time on the constable, who pursued them aided by a villager who had managed to borrow a gun. The dacoits escaped in the darkness. The action of this constable in facing absolutely alone a gang of over 20 armed dacoits on a dark night and of keeping up fire against them resulting in their retreat was most gallant. He knew that he was opposing dacoits who had become famous for their exploits during previous months.
20 Moti Lal, head constable, Jhansi district.	On March 14, 1918, this officer, then a constable, was proceeding, unarmed, on duty in a rural circle when he noticed a man with a gun in a forest clearing. The man started to run when he saw the constable. The latter gave chase; the armed man several times threatened to fire; the constable continued to pursue him. At last the man turned, fired and shot the constable in the arm breaking the bone and rendering him unconscious. The ruffian was subsequently arrested and sentenced to transportation. Moti Lal showed great gallantry in that alone, unarmed and with no hope of assistance, he pursued and persisted in pursuing an armed man who continually threatened to shoot him The Sessions Judge who tried his assailant commented on the great pluck shown by this officer.
21 Hansraj, constable, Moradabad district.	A gang of dacoits armed with a gun attacked the quarters of the station master at Bhojpur-Pipalsana railway station in the Moradabad district. Constable Hansraj who was posted at that station went off to a neighbouring village for assistance. When he came back to the station with a number of villagers the dacoits fired their gun and the villagers promptly bolted. The constable, although unarmed, thereupon attacked the gang single handed. He received numerous injuries and was in hospital for a month in consequence of a spear wound. The dacoits were subsequently brought before the court and sentenced to long terms of imprisonment. This constable acted with very great pluck and had he been supported by even a few of the villagers he would undoubtedly have succeeded in capturing some of the gang.

22 Munshi Man Singh, Rai Bahadur, Superintendent of Police.	On October 14, 1918, Munshi Man Singh, Superintendent of Police in Mainpuri district, received information of the presence of armed dacoits in Chilaunsa. Munshi Man Singh accompanied by Captain McLean, a head constable and a few others went to the house where the dacoits were hidden. He formed a cordon round the house and then boldly opened the door and walked in. He ordered the four men whom he found in the room to surrender. One of them called on the others to shoot and another made a dash for an adjoining room. Munshi Man Singh at once shot the latter whereupon Captain McLean entered the house and the two officers searched it. The dacoits were cowed by the shooting of one of their party. Two more dacoits were found in the back room, and altogether six were arrested in the house including the man who was shot. Munshi Man Singh on this occasion showed initiative, resource and courage which have been specially commended by the Sessions Judge who tried and sentenced the dacoits.
23 Paras Ram, Sub-Inspector of Police.	On the night of October 9, 1918, some 30 or 40 dacoits committed a dacoity in village Rehpura in the Agra district and carried off a considerable quantity of property. Sub-Inspector Paras Ram who was putting up for the night in a village a few miles away saw a party of 30 persons passing through this village at 3 A.M. and challenged them, but as they appeared to be harmless did not detain them. Shortly afterwards he heard that a dacoity had occurred in Rehpura and promptly followed up the party accompanied by a constable and 4 or 5 others. On overtaking the dacoits he found them dividing their loot. He was deserted by his party except by two men. The dacoits seeing him opened fire; he returned their fire, but as he had only 5 cartridges his ammunition was soon expended. The dacoits then closed on him, knocked him down, hacked him with swords and beat him with the butts of their guns till they thought he was dead. They then went off having severely handled his two faithful attendants. Sub-Inspector Paras Ram was eventually found by villagers and brought to hospital. He had 17 deep incised wounds on his head and body and for a long time there was no hope of his recovery. Luckily he was able to recover and is again on duty. This officer showed magnificent devotion to duty and an entire disregard for his own life. Such bravery is a fine example to his brother officers and men.
24 Mubashir Husain, Sub-Inspector of Police.	On the night of December 11, 1918, 46 dacoits headed by a notorious absconder Najba and armed with no less than 33 guns, 30 swords and other weapons attacked the house of some traders in village Bamrauli. They terrorized the neighbourhood by firing over 100 shots from their guns and succeeded in taking off about Rs. 1,000 worth of property. Information was sent to the nearest police station. Sub-Inspector Mubashir Husain arrived on the scene at about 3 A.M. He followed the dacoits accompanied by five constables and half a dozen villagers. They followed the tracks all day and at about 4 P.M. they came up with the gang in some ravines, twelve miles distant from Bamrauli. The police party promptly attacked the dacoits, two of whom were shot dead and two more arrested with some of the stolen property in their possession. A considerable portion of the remainder of the stolen property was found by the police in the ravines.

This Sub-Inspector showed most commendable perseverance, skill and pluck in following and finally attacking a very strong armed gang. His party was hopelessly out-numbered and inferior in armament but this did not prevent him from promptly attacking the dacoits. Such pluck in a young investigating officer affords an excellent example for his Indian brother officers.

PUNJAB.

25 William Alexander Marshall, Inspector of Police.

On the 10th April 1919, Mr. Marshall was on duty at the Police Lines level crossing at Amritsar with an armed reserve of 25 constables. Hearing that the Normal Girls Mission School had been attacked and set on fire, Inspector Marshall left half his reserve to guard the crossing, and with the other half went to the rescue. He drove off the mob, extinguished the fire and saved four Mission ladies who were hiding from the mob in the Mission buildings.

26 Aziz-ud-Din Ahmad, Inspector of Police.

On the 12th April 1919, information having been received that a mob was collecting to loot the Treasury at Tarn Taran, Inspector Aziz-ud-Din Ahmad first made preparations for the defence of the Treasury which contained over 3 lakhs. He then went with a small party of Police and dispersed the mob arresting two men.

Later on he investigated the case with great intelligence and energy and put up 97 men for trial, of whom 82 were convicted. His courage and initiative have been highly commended by Mr. Rudkin, O.B.E., I.C.S., District Magistrate, Amritsar, who tried the case. Mr. Rudkin remarked in his judgment "that the accused did not succeed in their object was due almost solely to the courage and initiative shown by Inspector Aziz-ud-Din Ahmad. If he had not had the courage and decision to move out against them, I think there is every likelihood that the small Police force would have been overwhelmed. His conduct in warding off the attack and in the subsequent investigation is worthy of very high praise indeed, and I think that his services deserve tangible recognition by the authorities. The Inspector's conduct deserves the more credit in that he had to act in defence of the Treasury without any assistance from the Magistrate on the spot, the Tahsildar.

27 Reginald Charles Albert Plomer, Deputy Superintendent of Police.

On the 10th April 1919, when the mob from the Amritsar city attempted to make its way into Civil Lines by the foot bridge over the Railway, Mr. Plomer at the head of a small body of police succeeded in forcing the crowd back and holding them in check until the arrival of the Military picquets, thereby undoubtedly saving Civil Lines.

During the investigation into the crimes committed by the mob, Mr. Plomer's unrivalled knowledge of the city of Amritsar and its inhabitants has been of the very greatest value.

28 Rai Sahib Dwarka Nath, Deputy Superintendent of Police.	On the evening of the 10th April 1919 this officer became aware of the fact that the peace of Lahore was threatened. He wisely went to see the Secretariat guard and to look round in the direction of the National Bank to see that all was quiet. On his arrival at Police Station, Anarkali, about 7 P.M., he found Sub-Inspector Gopal Das, who had just finished distributing ammunition and muskets and despatching all available men to the Mall, to hold back the mob. Without a moment's hesitation he took Sub-Inspector Gopal Das into his trap, and drove to the Mall as fast as he could. The Mall road was blocked by the crowd, but these two officers drove on to the tan-ride, and hurried on until they were level with the forefront of the crowd. Then hastily dismounting from the trap they came in front of the crowd, and joined the small Police force, which had arrived from Police Station, Anarkali, in their gallant efforts to stop a crowd of several thousands. Both officers were almost submerged in the crowd, which streamed round them and sometimes past them; but with admirable grit and pluck they stuck to their task of stemming the tide and preventing the mob snatching any of the Police muskets. Both officers were in mufti, and, when the firing began both narrowly escaped being shot; but throughout they displayed great personal courage and a fine disregard of danger. The Rai Sahib has throughout the subsequent arduous strain of investigation and other varied work shewn himself a most capable and reliable officer, devoted, cool and of sound judgment.
29 Maratab Ali, officiating Sub-Inspector of Police.	This officer was the first on the scene on the Mall on the 10th April 1919, when a huge crowd issuing from Anarkali had found its way past the Telegraph office and some distance up the Mall. With about a dozen rank and file he came at the double from the Police Station, Anarkali. They got ahead of the crowd, which by that time was roughly abreast of the Lawrence Statue, and opposing the crowd with their thin line made a most plucky and gallant effort to stem the tide of humanity. They were gradually forced back by the sheer impetus of the surging mob; but with great pluck and tenacity they stuck to their work, and shortly after received the order to fire from the Deputy Commissioner and the Deputy Inspector-General of Police, Criminal Investigation Department, who most opportunely arrived. It is not too much to say that the situation was in a large measure saved by the tenacity and grit of Sub-Inspector Maratab Ali and his handful of men. Other Indian officers also arrived within a very few minutes to his assistance; but to this officer must be given the credit of having been the first to arrive on the scene and of having thrown himself and his little band of Police unhesitatingly into the breach in spite of being hopelessly out-numbered.
30 Nasir Shah, Sub-Inspector of Police.	On the evening of the 10th April 1919, at Lahore, this officer accompanied Khan Sahib Abdul Ghani of the Police Station, City Kotwali with a small Police force, where both these officers pluckily held up and delayed a huge mob near the Mochi Gate. Equally with the Inspector this officer showed great personal courage,

	Throughout the subsequent trying period, when the authorities were faced with the possibility of fresh disturbances and the pressure of work was enormous, this officer was distinguished for devotion to duty as well as his capacity for work and cheerful endurance of discomfort, when he was in charge of a standing picquet inside the city. He thus set an excellent example to his subordinates at a critical time.
31 Agha Gama Khan, Inspector of Police.	For showing courage and resolution at Leiah, Muzaffargarh district, on 21st June 1918, in dispersing by the use of fire-arms a large and menacing mob which had conspired for the purpose of overawing officials engaged in recruiting and in inviting subscriptions to the War Loan. The crowd was not to be turned from its purpose by pacific measures and repeated orders to disperse, and advanced to attack when Inspector Agha Gama Khan, acting on the orders of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, fired upon the rioters, of whom 4 were killed and 10 were wounded.
32 Bawa Kharak Singh, Sub-Inspector of Police.	For conspicuous services, personal courage and fine leadership in holding back the mob at the Kasur Tahsil, when a large unruly crowd made an effort to plunder the Tahsil and Treasury. This officer was in command of the small party of Police who defended the Tahsil so successfully and held command until the arrival of the Deputy Superintendent of Police, Khan Sahib Ahmad Khan. In a critical and dangerous situation he maintained a bold front and set a fine example to his men. His services in the subsequent investigations were particularly valuable.
33 Tola Ram, Foot Constable No. 473, Lahore district.	On the 15th April 1919, a constable was wanted to accompany Mr. Donald, C.I.E., Deputy Inspector-General of Police, on a dangerous journey by road to Gujranwala, at a time when rebels had cut the railway communication and Gujranwala Station and public buildings were in flames. Mr. Clarke, Deputy Superintendent of Police, asked a group of men if any of them were willing to risk their lives for the Sirkar. He did not explain to them what duty they were required to perform. This Foot Constable immediately stepped forward and said that he was willing to volunteer for any duty and accordingly accompanied Mr. Donald. His personal courage was shown in his readiness to volunteer without any knowledge of the risk which he might be incurring and was a splendid example to others.
34 Tanwir Ahmad, Sub-Inspector of Police.	This officer, in 1915, displayed conspicuous gallantry and risked his life in effecting the arrest of a notorious character.
35 Sub-Inspector Gopal Dass, Head Clerk, Lahore district.	On the afternoon of the 10th April 1919, this officer was in the Police office. He was of the utmost assistance in enabling the Senior Superintendent of Police to expedite the issue of his special orders for the expected emergency. While the orders were being typed, he telephoned them to all concerned to avoid delay. About 6 P.M. as soon as he was free from office, he went round to Anarkali Police Station to see what progress had been made. Setting to work at once he rendered invaluable assistance to Inspector

Gopal Singh in quickly distributing arms and ammunition to the men. While these two officers were still distributing ammunition, intending to have every possible man under arms, news came that a mob was surging through Anarkali. Sub-Inspector Maratab Ali and a small force were despatched immediately at the double while the Inspector and Sub-Inspector Gopal Das continued personally handing out arms and ammunition to the men, until the Inspector himself, having sent off all available men, followed Sub-Inspector Maratab Ali, a few moments later. Almost immediately Rai Sahib Dwarka Nath, Deputy Superintendent of Police, reached the Thana, and Sub-Inspector Gopal Das told him hurriedly what had happened. The Sub-Inspector having now finished his work of arming and despatching men from the Police Station, jumped into the Deputy Superintendent of Police's trap and drove off with that officer to the Mall. By this time the mob had passed the Lawrence Statue. The two officers in the trap drove rapidly along the tan-ride, until they were level with the forefront of the crowd, then hastily dismounted and joined the small force of police from Police Station, Anarkali, endeavouring to stop the mob. The mob surged round them and sometimes past them; but with admirable pluck and tenacity these officers stuck to their difficult task of trying to stem the tide and prevent the mob seizing any police muskets, as they attempted to do. Both were in mufti, and when the firing started were nearly shot by their own men. Sub-Inspector Gopal Das showed admirable pluck, coolness and ability to tackle a serious and sudden emergency.

BURMA.

36 Lieutenant-Colonel John Lawrence William ffrench-Mullen, C.I.E., I.A., Deputy Inspector-General of Military Police.

A specially distinguished record in administrative service; success in organizing police forces; and prolonged service distingushed by exceptional ability and merit.

Lieutenant-Colonel ffrench-Mullen joined the Burma Military Police as a commandant in 1908, and has rendered very valuable service with the force. 37 Henry Donald Grantham, Superintendent of Police.	Special services in dealing with the serious outbreak of crime and public disorder. Mr. Grantham joined the Burma Police as an Assistant Superintendent in 1907. Owing to the scarcity of British officers arising out of the abnormal situation created by the war, he was posted to duty as an Assistant Commandant with the Burma Military Police. In 1918 he was granted a Commission in the Indian Army Reserve of Officers and took part in the recent operations against Manipur Kukis. It is impossible to speak too highly of his work in this connection. Though practically single-handed he protected the Kabaw Valley from hostile raids for many months, made excellent arrangements for the defence of the valley and rendered invaluable assistance to the columns operating in and near that valley. His services on this occasion were distinguished by exceptional merit and ability.
38 George Francis Danvers Colquhoun, Inspector of Police, 2nd grade, and Honorary Deputy Superintendent, Rangoon Town Police.	A specially distinguished record in detective service. In 1918 he was appointed to perform the duties of Inspecting Officer for the port of Rangoon in accordance with the rules made by the local Government under section 7 of the Foreigners Ordinance, 1914, in addition to his own duties with the honorary rank of Deputy Superintendent. He has proved himself to be an exceptionally hardworking officer, conspicuous for his integrity and zeal. The peace and security of Rangoon owe much to his detective ability and local knowledge.
39 Alexander William Cox, officiating Superintendent of Police.	A specially distinguished record in administrative as well as in detective service. Mr. Cox joined the Burma Police as a Head Constable in 1893, and officiated as an Inspector from 1899 till 1902 when he was confirmed in that rank. 40 Kulman Bhaju, Subadar-Major, Burma Military Police.	Success in organizing a Police force and in maintaining their organization in special difficulties. Subadar-Major Kulman Bhaju is now serving with the 85th Burma Rifles in Mesopotamia. He has served for 26 years with the Burma Military Police. He has always been distinguished for keenness and efficiency. He is an excellent officer of great experience and untiring energy and has been warmly praised by the British officers under whom he has served.
41 Richard Murphy, Sergeant, Rangoon Town Police.	Conspicuous gallantry in arresting an armed criminal who had run amok. On the night of the 8th November 1918, one Kwan Ah Kun, a Chinaman, who had been jilted by his sweetheart, ran amok, armed with two meat choppers. After cutting down five men, he met Constable Gulab Khan, who without hesitation endeavoured to arrest the assailant, but was wounded in the neck and right thumb. Gulab Khan's injuries, however, did not prevent him from pursuing Kwan Ah Kun down Canal Street where Sergeant Murphy, who was on patrol duty, joined in the chase. Kwan Ah Kun turned on Sergeant Murphy, who being unable to fire his revolver for fear of wounding the people in the street, attacked him with his stick. In the course of the fight that ensued Sergeant Murphy slipped and fell, which afforded the accused an opportunity to hack at him, inflicting a deep and ugly wound on his neck. In his efforts to seize the knives, Sergeant Murphy's hand was also severely cut. At this stage of the encounter, Sergeant Murphy had to withdraw from the chase through loss of blood and go to the hospital for treatment. Sergeant Murphy set a fine example of bravery in engaging the armed Chinaman in peril of his life.

The Sub-Inspector closed with him and received another sword wound on his right knee. In spite of the wounds received, the Sub-Inspector stuck to this man and succeeded in arresting him, whilst the constables and chaukidars arrested Azimuddin, the other dacoit.
44 Rama Nand Pandey, Constable.	On 4th November 1918, Constable Rama Nand Pandey of Patna district had escorted a female prisoner from Bankipore Court to the Jail. The woman was taken to a well for a bath when she suddenly jumped into the well, with the intention of committing suicide. Constable Rama Nand Pandey immediately jumped in after her and saved her. The well is 40 feet deep and had 15—20 feet of water in it and there was no means of egress. The constable showed great gallantry and was in great danger of being drowned himself.
	CENTRAL PROVINCES.
45 George Adrian Carroll, Assistant Superintendent of Police.	On the evening of the 3rd June 1919, a report was brought to Mr. Carroll, Assistant District Superintendent of Police, at the dâk bungalow, Ellichpur, that a Pathan sowar of the 30th Lancers (Gordon's Horse) had shot his Ressaidar and was threatening to shoot others. Mr. Carroll took a revolver and walked over to the quarters where the Ressaidar had been shot and where the sowar, Wasiulla Khan, presumably was. It was dark with a slight moon. The sowar was standing under a tree and called to Mr. Carroll to stop, which he did about 40 yards away from the sowar, with his men 10 yards behind him. The sowar was in a very excited state and Mr. Carroll talked to him and soothed him down for about 20 minutes, finally inducing him to come up and hand over his rifle and ammunition. The Pathan refused to be touched by anybody except Mr. Carroll and threatened to shoot anybody else. Mr. Carroll took him to the Police Station and there handcuffed him. Mr. Carroll acted in a cool, plucky way throughout and undoubtedly risked his life to prevent this man running amok and shooting anybody he met. His action has created a great impression among all who saw it and heard of it.

48 Faiz Talab Khan, Sub-Inspector of Police.	On the 10th-11th June 1919, Mohamadzai Police Post in the Kohat district was attacked by a force of tribesmen estimated at between 200 and 300 men. Sub-Inspector Faiz Talab Khan proceeded from Kohat with a force of 20 men and fought his way against considerable odds to a point within about 500 yards of the post. Telephone communication with the post had not been cut, and the exact position of the enemy being communicated to Kohat Fort, the guns opened fire on the enemy. It was undoubtedly the plucky advance of the party under Sub-Inspector Faiz Talab Khan which led the enemy to believe that the post was being relieved, combined with the effect of the artillery fire, which made the enemy retire to the Oblan Pass where they were discovered next morning and bombed by an aeroplane. The gallantry and initiative displayed by Sub-Inspector Faiz Talab Khan is worthy of high praise and deserving of reward.
49 Akhtar Ali Shah, Sub Inspector of Police.	On the 8th April 1918, Sub-Inspector Akhtar Ali Shah followed up for eleven and a half hours a strong gang of raiders led by the notorious Shinwari dacoit, Amam Ali. The raiders numbered about fifteen strong and were well armed whilst the Sub-Inspector only had with him a small party whose total armament consisted of three rifles, three shot guns and two revolvers. The tracks of the gang were followed from 6 A.M. till 5-30 P.M. when the raiders were encountered in some broken ground near Garhi Faizulla. In spite of the fact that the Sub-Inspector and his party were dead beat when they came upon the raiders, they immediately attacked and, although they did not succeed in accounting for any of them, the dacoits were compelled to drop the two Hindus and the property they had captured and to beat a hasty retreat. The pluck and tenacity displayed by Sub-Inspector Akhtar Ali Shah is deserving of high recognition.
50 Zabta Khan, Foot Constable No. 1099, Peshawar district.	On the night of the 11th-12th June 1919, a large gang of armed dacoits attacked the village of Badeber in the Peshawar district. On the alarm being raised, Foot Constable Zabta Khan and Foot Constable Gul Ahmed, who were in the village on recruiting duty, raised a small party of villagers armed with lathis and attacked one of the picquets posted by the raiders. This picquet was on the main road and had been causing severe casualties among the villagers. In spite of the heavy fire directed on the party, the rush was successful and the dacoits composing the picquet were put to flight. Foot Constable Zabta Khan struck one of the raiders on the head with a lathi and capturing his rifle and bandolier of cartridges opened fire on the gang. The courage and enterprise shown by this small party in rushing and putting to flight the picquet undoubtedly improved the situation and resulted in more villagers turning out and driving off the raiders.

For the pluck and initiative displayed by him Foot Constable Zabta Khan is deserving of the highest reward.

51 Gul Ahmed, Foot Constable No. 900, Peshawar district. — On the night of the 11th-12th June 1919, a large gang of armed dacoits attacked the village of Badober in the Peshawar district. On the alarm being raised, Foot Constable Gul Ahmed and Foot Constable Zabta Khan, who were in the village on recruiting duty, raised a small party of villagers armed with lathis and attacked one of the picquets posted by the raiders. This picquet was on the main road and had been causing severe casualties among the villagers. In spite of the heavy fire directed on the party, the rush was successful and the dacoits composing the picquet were put to flight. Foot Constable Gul Ahmed, who was armed with an axe, himself succeeded in killing one raider and wounding two others. The courage and enterprise shown by this small party in rushing and putting to flight the picquet undoubtedly improved the situation and resulted in more villagers turning out and driving off the raiders.

For the pluck and initiative displayed by him, Foot Constable Gul Ahmed is deserving of the highest reward.

BALUCHISTAN.

52 Syed Hassan, Deputy Superintendent of Police. — A very useful and reliable officer who has done most meritorious detective work in important and dangerous cases.

BARODA STATE.

53 Bajirao Appasaheb Ghatge, Police Naib Suba (Superintendent), Amreli district. — Mr. Ghatge entered the Baroda Judicial Service in 1904. In 1908 he was transferred to the State Police. He has spent nearly ten years as Police Naib Suba of the Amreli district in Kathiawar. During the outbreak of outlawry in 1914 he distinguished himself by his prompt and thorough measures against the outlaws and quickly succeeded in restoring peace in his district. Since that time he has kept Amreli free from their depredations, although murders and dacoities have been rife in the neighbouring parts of Junagadh and Bhawanagar. He has rendered notable service to Southern Kathiawar by securing the arrest of the outlaws Nur Mahomed and four others, who had committed several murders and dacoities, after all the efforts of the Junagadh Police to secure the gang had failed.

Name of officer and rank.	Statement of services for which in particular the decoration has been conferred.

In spite of the incentives to crimes of violence supplied by the present prevailing scarcity, Mr. Ghatge has succeeded in keeping his district in excellent order.

In November 1918 he ran down and secured a gang of 200 armed Daffars, who had terrorized Kathiawar for years. In this matter he showed great resource, perseverance and personal courage. Accompanied by one other policeman he approached the gang, which was encamped on a hill and called on it to surrender. Some of the members did so, but the greater part scattered and fled. Mr. Ghatge pursued the gang for four days through the jungle and as soon as he came up with them, attacked their camp. They fired on the police and went off in two parties, which were successively hunted down and captured.

Mr. Ghatge has earned the thorough confidence of the Amreli public and has maintained throughout good relations with the Police of neighbouring States and the Agency.

At the end of November, 1919, wholesale prices of cereals and pulses in India showed, on an average, a rise of 1 per cent, as compared with the preceding fortnight. The price of rice indicated a fall of 3 per cent (unweighted average); the weighted average, however, showed a rise of 7 per cent. There was no fluctuation in the prices of wheat, barley and arhar dál. Ghi showed a rise of 5 per cent and salt 1 per cent. The price of raw sugar (gúr) remained unchanged. The all-India fluctuations are stated below :—

In the paid-up share capital Bombay shows a net increase of Rs. 3,43,88,000, Bengal of Rs. 2,54,11,000, and Madras of Rs. 15,99,000, while the Central Provinces and Berar show a net decrease of Rs. 7,95,000 and Delhi of Rs. 6,51,000. D. N. GHOSH,

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA.

CALCUTTA, DECEMBER 22, 1919.

Second RICE Forecast, 1919-20.

THIS forecast is based on reports received from provinces, which contain about 99 per cent of the total area under rice in British India. It refers practically to the whole rice crop (early and late) in all the reporting provinces, with the exception of the crop in Coorg and the late (spring) crop in Bombay. The reports relate to conditions up to and including the beginning of December.

The total area reported amounts to 76,888,000 acres, as against 75,067,000 acres (the revised figure) at this time last year, showing an increase of 2 per cent. As compared with the revised final estimate of last year (76,052,000 acres), the present estimate shows an increase of 1 per cent. Weather conditions were, on the whole, favourable, and the condition of the crop is reported to be generally good.

The following table shows the acreage and estimated outturn as far as available. The table of outturn is incomplete, owing to the absence of estimates from Madras and the United Provinces. These latter provinces furnish outturn figures for the final forecasts published in February.

The provincial reports are summarised below :—

Bengal (26·1 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—(i) The area sown with autumn (aus) rice is reported to be 4,962,000 acres as against 5,067,000 acres reported at this time last year. For the province as a whole, the average outturn for autumn rice is estimated at 87 per cent of the normal, and on this basis the total yield of cleaned rice works out to 1,665,000 tons, as against 1,505,000 tons last year, or an increase of 11 per cent. Good rainfall in June favoured the growth of the crop. Heavy rainfall in July and in the early part of August caused damage in the districts of the Presidency division, Hooghly, Bogra, Pubna, Malda, Faridpur, and Bakarganj. Some injury by insects is also reported from the 24-Parganas, Jessore, and Jalpaiguri. The season, on the whole, was much better than last year.

(ii) The area under winter (aman) rice is estimated at 15,551,000 acres, which is 3 per cent below the estimate at this time last year. The average outturn is estimated at 90 per cent of the normal, as against 77 per cent estimate at this time last year. On this basis, the total yield is estimated at 6,427,000 tons, which is 14 per cent above the corresponding estimate of last year. The season is reported to have been favourable throughout for the broadcast crop. In west Bengal it has also been exceptionally good for the transplanted variety, although insufficient rain in October affected the crop on high lands to a slight extent. In east and north Bengal the conditions in July and August were not good for the transplanted rice owing to deficient rainfall. In September, however, the rainfall was generally in excess and the heavy rain brought by the cyclone in east Bengal did great good to the late transplanted crop. On the whole, the condition of the broadcast aman rice is very good and that of the transplanted crop is satisfactory.

(iii) An area of 370,000 acres was reported in March last to be under summer (boro) rice, this being the same as reported in the previous year. The estimated yield was reported at that time to be 140,000 tons, as against 141,000 tons last year.

Bihar and Orissa (20·3 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—(i) The area under autumn rice is estimated at 3,881,000 acres, as against 3,853 000 acres last year. The increase in area sown this year is due to favourable weather conditions at the sowing time. The average outturn for the province is estimated at 120 per cent of the normal, and, on this basis, the total yield is calculated at 1,711,000 tons, as against 1,062,000 tons, the revised estimate of last year, or an increase of 61 per cent. The season was on the whole good.

(ii) The area under winter rice is estimated at 11,329,000 acres, as against 11,218,000 acres reported at this time last year. According to the estimates of District Officers the average outturn for the province as a whole works out to 99 per cent of the normal; but the provincial Director considers this an underestimate and raises it to 115 per cent of the normal. On this basis the total yield is estimated at 7,179,000 tons, which is 93 per cent above the estimate at this time last year. Since the issue of the first forecast, the weather has continued to be generally favourable. The late rains were very beneficial to the crop in most districts.

(iii) An area of 38,000 acres was reported in March last to be under summer rice, which is 5 per cent below the corresponding estimate of last year. The outturn was estimated at 12,000 tons, as against 14,000 tons in the previous year.

Madras (14·2 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—The area sown up to the end of November is estimated at 10,522,000 acres, which is 26 per cent above the estimate made at this date last year. The increase, which is fairly well distributed throughout the Presidency, is due largely to the favourable season, especially in rain-fed areas, as well as the return to paddy of the precariously irrigated tracts where cotton and groundnut had taken its place in previous years. The average outturn is expected to be above normal and is at present estimated at 107 per cent of the normal. A certain amount of damage was, however, caused by heavy rains just before harvest in the deltas and the Circars.

Burma (13·4 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—The area sown is reported to be 10,409,000 acres, as compared with 10,675,000 acres, the corresponding estimate of last year. The total yield for the province is provisionally estimated at 5,966,000 tons of unhusked rice (=3,997,000 tons of cleaned rice). In Lower Burma, the early rains were deferred and insufficient, and the middle rains were erratic, heavy showers being followed by long breaks. In November the rainfall was general and improved crop prospects. In Upper Burma, the rainfall was scanty and irregular. The November showers, although general, were too late to benefit the crop except in low-lying lands. The surplus available for export is expected to be 2,290,000 tons of unhusked rice (equivalent to 1,800,000 tons of cargo rice or 1,525,000 tons of cleaned rice), as against 2,974,000 tons of unhusked rice (equivalent to 2,350,000 tons of cargo rice or 2 million tons of cleaned rice) estimated at this time last year.

United Provinces (8·4 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—(i) The area now reported is 6,490,000 acres, which is 2 per cent below the estimate made at this time last year. Most of the rice-growing districts received sufficient rain for the crop, except in parts of Rohilkhand where more rain was required for the late crop. The condition of the early crop was, on the whole, fairly good and its outturn for the provinces is estimated at 90 per cent of the normal. The late rice was affected in parts of the provinces by want of rain during the latter half of October, and its outturn is estimated at 85 per cent of the normal.

(ii) The estimates for the hot weather (summer) rice were reported in October last to be 17,000 acres and 3,000 tons, as against 25,000 acres and 12,000 tons last year.

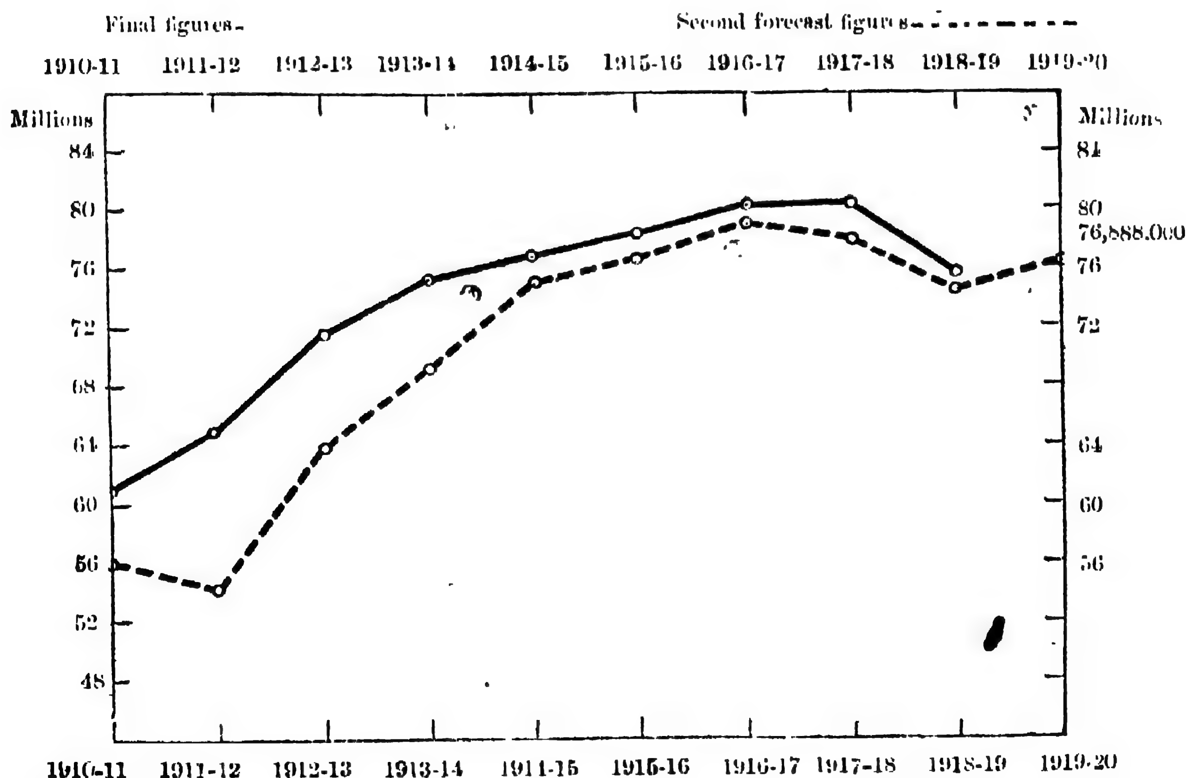
Central Provinces and Berar (6·4 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—The total area is estimated at 5,762,000 acres (42,000 acres being in Berar and 636,000 acres in the Feudatory States*), which is 9 per cent above the area of last year. The total yield is estimated at 1,889,000 tons (7,000 tons being in Berar and 183,000 tons in the Feudatory States), as against 744,000 tons for last year. The seasonal conditions at the sowing time were favourable and germination was successful. The crop on low-lying and rich lands suffered from excessive rain during August in the Jubbulpore, Narsingpur, and Hoshangabad districts. The Berar districts, on the other hand, required more rain. An opportune break and bright sunshine in the northern districts and a few timely showers in Berar in October and November greatly improved the condition of the crop.

Assam (6 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—(i) The area sown with autumn rice is estimated at 705,000 acres, which is 7 per cent below the revised area of last year. The average outturn for the province is estimated at 75 per cent of the normal, and the total yield at 167,000 tons, which is 1 per cent over the estimate at this date last year.

* Six out of twelve Feudatory States have furnished estimates this year for the first time.

(ii) The area under winter rice is estimated at 3,142,000 acres, as against 3,267,000 acres reported at this time last year. The average outturn of the province as estimated by the District Officers is 93 per cent of the normal; but the Director of Agriculture considers this an underestimate, and raises it to 100 per cent. On this basis, the total yield is estimated at 1,335,000 tons, as against 1,015,000 tons at this time last year, showing an increase of 31 per cent. The decrease in area was due to drought during the sowing and transplanting periods. The weather conditions, however, improved since then. The rains in September and early October greatly stimulated the transplantation and growth of the crop, and the yield is turning out much better than was anticipated.

(iii) An area of 251,000 acres was reported in March last to be under summer rice with an outturn of 79,000 tons, as against 250,000 acres and 90,000 tons last year.



Bombay (2·4 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—The area sown is reported to be 2,359,000 acres (614,000 acres being in Baroda and the other Indian States), which is 5 per cent above the area of last year. The total yield is estimated at 1,277,000 tons (314,000 tons being in Baroda and the other Indian States), as against 511,000 tons last year. In Gujarat, the crop progressed fairly well in spite of the delay in transplantation. In the Deccan and the Konkan the crop throve well under favourable conditions after tansplantation. In the Karnatak, want of sufficient rain was felt in some places for the proper growth of the unirrigated crop. The irrigated crop throve well.

Sind (1·5 per cent of the total area under rice in British India).—The total area is estimated at 1,100,000 acres (10,000 acres being in the Khairpur State), which is 9 per cent over last year's area. The total yield is estimated at 570,000 tons (3,000 tons being in the Khairpur State), as against 295,000 tons estimated at this date last year, or an increase of 93 per cent. Owing to good water supply this year, the crop generally did well except in parts of the Hyderabad district where it suffered from floods.

Chart.—The chart below shows the variations in the second forecast, as compared with those in the final figures for the last nine years. It should be borne in mind that the large increases from 1911-12 to 1913-14 are due to a considerable extent to the addition of reporting tracts from year to year.

AREA OF RICE

(In million acres)

Rice crop in foreign countries.—Information, specially obtained from the British Consulates, indicates that the area sown with rice in Siam in 1919 is estimated at 6,000,000 acres with an yield of 1,855,000 tons. The yield of rice in Japan is estimated at 8,488,000 tons (60,650,000 koku).

From the latest available information published by the International Institute of Agriculture, Rome, it appears that the area sown with the rice crop in Italy in 1919 is estimated at 346,000 acres, which is 1 per cent above the final estimate of last year. According to the monthly Crop Report (October 1919) published by the Bureau of Crop Estimates, Washington, the estimates of the rice crop in the United States of America in 1919 are 1,091,000 acres and 887,000 tons.

From unofficial sources, it appears that the rice crop in Korea is likely to be 25 per cent below last year's crop, owing to severe drought.

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA

CALCUTTA, DECEMBER 23, 1919.

Third COTTON Forecast, 1919-20.

This forecast is based on reports furnished by provinces, which comprise the entire cotton area of India. It deals with reports on both the early and late varieties of cotton up to the beginning of December, 1919. A fourth and final report will, as usual, be published in the third week of February, 1920.

The total area this year amounts to 22,186,000 acres, as against 19,677,000 acres reported at this date last year, or an increase of 13 per cent. As compared with the final estimate of last year (20,497,000 acres) the present estimate shows an increase of 8 per cent.

The total estimated yield is 5,668,000 bales of 400 lbs each, as against 3,282,000 bales estimated at his date last year, or an increase of 73 per cent. As tompared with the final (February) estimate of last cear the present estimate shows an increase of 54 per yent.

The detailed figures for the provinces are as follows (the figures for previous years are given on page 15) :—

On the basis of these figures, the average outturn per acre of the present crop for all India is 102 lbs as against 67 lbs last year.

Weather conditions have on the whole been favourable and the condition of the crop is reported to be generally good.

The provincial reports are summarised below :—

Bombay (27·9 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The total area under both early and late cotton is estimated up to 1st December at 5,283,000 acres (including 1,763,000 acres in the Indian States), which is 14 per cent above the area reported at this date last year. Sowing extended almost everywhere in Gujarat and the Deccan, owing partly to the high prices obtained for the crop last year and partly to the favourable sowing rains. The yield is at present estimated at 1,362,000 bales (including 409,000 bales in the Indian States), which is 148 per cent above the estimate made at this date last year. In Gujarat the crop has progressed well and maintained healthy vigour all over. In the north Deccan the crop was slightly damaged by rains, but it improved later on and has yielded more than an average crop; in the other Deccan districts the crop suffered from prolonged drought after sowing and the rain received later on was generally too late to be useful, although it helped the crop in some places. In the Karnatak, deficient rains at the early stage delayed sowing operations and their excess later on affected the young crop, but the subsequent season has been fairly satisfactory, and the crop is making good progress.

The area and outturn of cotton by trade descriptions in the Bombay Presidency are :—

		Acres	Bales
Oomras	Khandesh	1,400,000	435,000
	Barsi and Nagar	211,000	37,000
Dholleras		1,773,000	455,000

Coompta Dharwars		939,000	220,000
Westerns and Northerns		204,000	30,000

Central Provinces and Berar (19·7 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The total area sown is reported to be 4,494,000 acres (3,088,000 acres being in Berar), which is 7 per cent above the area reported at this date last year. The yield is estimated at 1,285,000 bales (914,000 bales being in Berar), which is 114 per cent above the corresponding estimate of last year. Sowings were made under favourable climatic conditions and germination was successful. Heavy and continuous rainfall in August in the northern districts caused some delay in the weeding operations, and also slight damage to the crop; but the area sown here is insignificant. The districts of Berar which were at that time in need of more rain received a few showers in September, while an opportune break and clear weather in the north of the Central Provinces improved the situation in all the principal cotton-growing areas. Light showers in October and November also benefited the crop.

Madras (10·1 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The area sown up to the 25th November is estimated at 2,167,000 acres, which is 20 per cent less than the area reported at the corresponding date of last year. The decrease is attributed partly to the competition of other crops and partly to a fall in the price of cotton and a rise in that of almost everything else. The yield is provisionally estimated at 394,000 bales, or 23 per cent below the estimate at this date last year. The area and yield figures given above include those for the States of Banganapalle and Pudukkottai. The introduction of the Pest Act in the Coimbatore district has considerably reduced the area under perennial dry Cambodia cotton.

The area and outturn according to trade descriptions are as follows :—

	Acres	Bales
Tinnevellys, Salems, Cambodias	798,000	210,000
Northerns and Westerns	1,125,000	141,000
Cocanadas	215,000	40,000
Others	29,000	3,000

Punjab (6·1 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The area is returned at 2,211,000 acres (187,000 acres being in the Indian States), which is 40 per cent above the corresponding area of last year. The increase is attributed to high prices of cotton, abundant supply of canal water, and heavy rainfall after July. The yield is estimated at 615,000 bales (including 69,000 bales in the Indian States), which shows an increase of 23 per cent as compared with the estimate made at this time last year. The season was not generally favourable. There was an abundance of rain in July and August, but very little in September, and the months of October and November were entirely dry. The crops on unirrigated areas suffered through drought. Both American and Desi cotton fared badly and in places bollworms did much damage to the crop. The yield is generally below normal.

United Provinces (5·6 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The area sown is reported to be 1,268,000 acres (12,000 acres being in the Rampur State), which is 47 per cent above the area reported at this date last year. The increase is attributed to favourable weather conditions. The yield is estimated at 135,000 bales (including 3,000 bales in the Rampur State), which is 149 per cent above the corresponding estimate of last year. There was excessive rainfall in all the cotton-growing districts in August, and the growth of the crop was to a certain extent retarded by the waterlogging of the soil. Heavy and general rain fell in most districts in the first week of September, but the fine weather which prevailed from the second week of September was very beneficial to the crop and improved it greatly. For the provinces, as a whole, the estimate of yield is about 85 per cent of the normal, as against 50 per cent last year. Pickings commenced about the usual time, early in October, and the yield was good.

Sind (1·1 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The area is estimated at 317,000 acres (7,000 acres being in the Khairpur State), which is 17 per cent above the area reported at this date last year. The increase is attributed to the steady and plentiful water supply and to the incentive of good prices. The yield is estimated at 98,000 bales (including 2,000 bales in the Khairpur State), which is the same as the corresponding estimate of last year. The season has been generally favourable to the crop. In the south bollworms appeared owing to excessive rains and did some damage to the crop.

Burma (1·1 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The area sown is reported to be 373,000 acres, which is 10 per cent above the area reported at the corresponding date last year. The increase is attributed to the abnormally high prices for cotton prevailing in the past few years. The yield is estimated at 75,000 bales, being 7 per cent above the yield reported at the corresponding date last year. Sowings generally were normal, but a shortage of rain in June and July affected the crop, the middle rains being also poor.

Bengal (0·3 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The area is estimated at 69,000 acres, being 5 per cent below last year's area at this date. The yield is estimated at 21,000 bales, which is 19 per cent below the corresponding estimate of last year. Heavy rain affected the crop in the Chittagong Hill Tracts, causing a considerable reduction in the output. The prospects of the late crop are reported to be fair. The area and outturn of cotton according to trade descriptions are :—

	Acres	Bales
Bengal Sind	4,000	2,000
Comillas	65,000	19,000

Bihar and Orissa (0·3 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The area is estimated at 73,000 acres, which is 5 per cent below last year's area at this date. The yield is estimated at 20,000 bales, which is 5 per cent above the corresponding estimate of last year. The weather conditions were generally favourable for the growth of the crop. Sowing of the late variety has not as yet commenced in Cuttack.

North-West Frontier Province (0·2 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The area is reported to be 50,000 acres, being 28 per cent above the estimate made at this time last year. The increase is generally due to the high prices obtained for cotton last year and the abnormal increase in the price of cloth. The estimated yield is 5,000 bales, as compared with 9,000 bales, the corresponding estimate of last year. The yield has been generally below average.

Assam (0·2 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The area sown is estimated at 33,000 acres, which is the same as that reported at this time last year. The estimated yield is 13,000 bales, which is 8 per cent above the corresponding estimate of last year. The rains in September did some damage in Nowgong and the Garo Hills, but subsequently weather conditions improved considerably. URGENT ORDERS.

The Board of Trade, Import and Export Licence Section, announces that, in collaboration with the Department of Overseas Trade, an arrangement has been made whereby firms receiving orders which require immediate acceptance may telegraph details of any such order to the Department of Overseas Trade in order to ascertain whether a licence will be granted for the export of the goods if the order is accepted.

In the event of an applicant being promised a licence he will be enabled to deal with the order straightaway with the knowledge that upon application being made in the proper form to the Export Licence Department the licence will be granted.

The telegrams should be addressed to "Orders, c/o Advantage, Stock, London." They should give in each case in addition to the name and postal or telegraphic address of the applicant the quantity and description of the goods comprised in the order and the name and address of the ultimate consignee if the goods are destined for a neutral country. In the case of orders from Allied or British Territory or from Territory in the occupation of troops of the Associated Governments, the consignee need not be stated; and it will be sufficient merely to give the country of destination. A reply of 24 words (1/3) must be prepaid.

Applicants are requested in their own interest to confine their enquiries to orders needing a very urgent decision, since the fewer the enquiries the more promptly can answers be given.

Any subsequent correspondence that is necessary in connection with the telegraphic enquiries should be addressed to the Comptroller General, Department of Overseas Trade (Export Facilities Section), 4, Queen Anne's Gate Buildings, Westminster, S.W. 1.

No. 36.—The following is published for general information :—

No. 17347.

Delhi, the 30th December 1919.

RESOLUTION—By the Government of India, Army Department. Introduction of "Royal Air Force Instructions (India)" and "Royal Air Force Orders (India)."

In Army Department Resolution No. 2228, dated the 21st December 1917, the Government of India approved of the introduction of Army Instructions (India), as the medium for conveying the orders of the Right Hon'ble the Secretary of State for India, or the Governor General in Council, on matters affecting the Army in India.

2. Hitherto, orders relating to matters affecting the Royal Air Force in India, which require the sanction of the Government of India, have been conveyed either by means of Government letters, or, if the subject has been of general interest and of a non-confidential nature, through the medium of Army Instructions (India).

3. Following the practice adopted in the United Kingdom whereby all orders regarding the Royal Air Force are issued separately from those concerning the Army, and in view of the expansion of the Royal Air Force in India, the Government of India have decided that the procedure detailed below shall be adopted, with effect from the 1st January 1920, for the promulgation of decisions of Government and the orders affecting the Royal Air Force in India issued by the Air Officer Commanding, Royal Air Force, acting under the orders of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in India :—

(i) Army Department letters conveying the sanction of the Government of India on subjects relating to the Royal Air Force will, in future, be restricted to cases of individual or special application, and to matters of a confidential nature.

(ii) Decisions not within the powers of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in India, and which convey the orders of the Right Hon'ble the Secretary of State for India or the Governor General in Council, on matters of a non-confidential nature affecting the Royal Air Force in India as a whole, will, in future, be issued simultaneously to all authorities concerned, in a form of communication to be designated "Royal Air Force Instructions (India)."

(iii) Orders of general importance issued by the Air Officer Commanding, Royal Air Force, acting under the orders of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in India, which do not require the sanction of the Government of India, will, in future, be promulgated as "Royal Air Force Orders (India)." Air Ministry Orders, etc., which are deemed applicable to the Royal Air Force in India and do not involve expenditure, will be republished for general information in "Royal Air Force Orders (India)." Nothing, however, relating to the regulation of civil aviation in India should be published in these Orders Nor should any matter affecting any portion of the Land Forces serving under the Government of India be published in these Orders without the previous concurrence of the Head of the Branch of Army Headquarters concerned.

(iv) The Royal Air Force Instructions (India) will be printed over the signature of the Secretary to the Government of India, Army Department, and will appear on separate sheets numbered consecutively. They will be issued from time to time as may be necessary from the Government Press to all authorities, civil and military concerned, in accordance with a distribution list of requirements. The first issues of these Instructions will contain a reprint of all the orders special to the Royal Air Force which have appeared in Army Instructions (India) since the 1st January 1918. A bound copy of these Instructions will be issued quarterly with an Index.

(v) The Royal Air Force Orders (India) will be printed over the signature of the Air Officer Commanding, Royal Air Force in India, and will be issued from the Government Press regularly once a week to all concerned in accordance with a distribution list of requirements.

Order.—Ordered that a copy of this Resolution be published in the Gazette of India; ordered also that it should be communicated to the several Departments of the Government of India, the Financial Adviser, Military Finance; all Local Governments and Administrations; Heads of Branches of Army Headquarters, the Director, Royal Indian Marine, and all Controllers of Military Accounts.

URGENT ORDERS.

The Board of Trade, Import and Export Section, announces that, in collaboration with the Department of Overseas Trade, an arrangement has been made whereby firms receiving orders which require immediate acceptance may telegraph details of any such order to the Department of Overseas Trade in order to ascertain whether a licence will be granted for the export of the goods if the order is accepted.

In the event of an applicant being promised a licence he will be enabled to deal with the order straightaway with the knowledge that upon application being made in the proper form to the Export Licence Department the licence will be granted.

The telegrams should be addressed to "Orders, care of Advantage, Stock, London." They should give in each case in addition to the name and postal or telegraphic address of the applicant the quantity and description of the goods comprised in the order and the name and address of the ultimate consignee if the goods are destined for a neutral country. In the case of orders from Allied or British Territory or from Territory in the occupation of troops of the Associated Governments, the consignee need not be stated; and it will be sufficient merely to give the country of destination. A reply of 24 words (1-3) must be prepaid.

Applicants are requested in their own interest to confine their enquiries to orders needing a very urgent decision, since the fewer the enquiries the more promptly can answers be given.

Any subsequent correspondence that is necessary in connection with the telegraphic enquiries should be addressed to the Comptroller-General, Department of Overseas Trade (Export Facilities Section), 4, Queen Anne's Gate Buildings, Westminster, S.W.-1.

War Office,
29th November, 1919.

His Majesty the KING has been graciously pleased to approve of the following awards to the undermentioned officers, in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field :—

AWARDED THE DISTINGUISHED SERVICE ORDER.

Maj. Henry Whitten Hickie, 84th Punjabis, I.A. (Black Sea)

By his skilful handling of a tactical situation at Shusha on the 4th June 1919, he enabled one company of the 84th Punjabis to be interposed, with very slight loss, between considerable forces of Tartars and Armenians engaged in a faction fight. To carry this out he walked under heavy rifle fire from the Armenian trenches to the Tartar positions, showing great coolness and resource.

Capt. Norman Henry Prendergast, Queen Victoria's Own Corps of Guides, attd. North Waziristan Militia, I.A. (India)

He has led detachments of his corps gallantly on all operations, especially on 27th May, 1919, at Miranshah, and has always shown high soldierly qualities. The fact that practically the whole of his corps has remained loyal is chiefly due to his personal influence and power of command.

AWARDED A BAR TO THE MILITARY CROSS.

Capt. Norman Burgan, M.C., 2/11th Gurkha Rifles, I.A. (India)

He commanded the leading company of his battalion in the attack on Khargali Ridge on 11th May, 1919, with great courage and determined leadership. By his dash and rapidity of movement in seizing the centre of the position he enabled other portions of the battalion to reach the hostile gun emplacements, resulting in the capture of four guns with ammunition and horses.

(M.C. gazetted 11th January, 1919.)

Lt. (A./Capt.) Geoffrey Pigot, M.C., 1/19th Punjabis, I.A. (Black Sea)

For gallantry in action on Bahram Ali front on 16th January, 1919. By his prompt action and able disposition of the advanced British troops, of which he was in command, he enabled an attack by the enemy in overwhelming numbers to be held off till reinforcements arrived. His coolness and decision throughout the action inspired confidence in all ranks.

(M.C. gazetted 12th September, 1919.)

AWARDED THE MILITARY CROSS.

T./Lt. (A./Capt) Ernest Frank Bugler, 35th Sikhs, I.A. (India)

For conspicuous gallantry on 17th May, 1919, at Dakka. Several times during the fight he collected and got forward parties of our men who had become leaderless. He directed fire on to parties of the enemy who were holding up our advance. He assisted in the removal of wounded, continually exposing himself whilst doing so to a very heavy fire. All through the attack he set a very fine example to the men.

---

Lt. (A./Capt.) Stewart Dudley, 27th Light Cavalry, I.A. (India)

By the bold leading of his squadron he delivered a decisive defeat to the enemy on 31st May 1919, at Murtaza. He personally disposed of six of the enemy himself. The moral effect of this charge was great, and some 150 of the enemy were killed or wounded. He did fine work.

Lt. Reginald Leonard Haine, V.C., H.A.C., attd. 35th Sikhs, I.A. (India)

For conspicuous gallantry on 17th May 1919, at Dakka. On many occasions during the fight near the summit of the hill he did everything in his power to collect the men for an attack on the enemy entrenches on the top in face of very heavy fire. When it was decided to retire and take up a position further down the hill, he collected all the men he could gather, and before descending, assisted in getting all the wounded away.

---

Capt. John Sydney Lethbridge, R.E., attd. 57th Coy., Sappers and Miners, I.A. (India)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at Thal, 27th May-2nd June, 1919. During the siege he was untiring in helping all units to improve their defences. He improvised a fresh hospital, and showed great energy throughout, working for the most part under shell and sniping fire.

Lt. Thomas Ivor Stevenson, K.R.R.C., Spec. Res., attd. 2/8th Gurkha Rif., I.A. (India)

For good leadership and conspicuous gallantry during the withdrawal to camp from Orange Patch Ridge on 15th May, 1919. The enemy pressed the retirement heavily, and being without signallers, he went from one position to another under continual fire and personally arranged the retirement of each party of his force. The retirement was carried out most successfully.

Lt. Wilfred Charles Tungate, I.A.R.O., attd. 1/9th Gurkha Rif., I.A. (India)

On the 17th May, 1919, on the attack on the Ridge he led a party with the greatest gallantry to within twenty yards of the summit, and maintained himself there unsupported in the face of greatly superior forces for many hours. When eventually reinforced, he and his party were the first on the summit.

Bengal.—The week was rainless. Reaping of winter paddy is nearing completion. Transplanting of summer rice is progressing. Prospects of standing spring crops are fair to good. The average price of common rice has fallen by about 0·72 per cent.

Bihar and Orissa.—There was no rain during the week. Harvesting of paddy and pressing of sugarcane continue. Standing crops are, on the whole, doing well. More rain is wanted in parts of Tirhut, Bhagalpore and Purnea. The price of common rice has risen in nine districts, fallen in four and remained stationary in the remaining districts. The average price of local common rice at headquarters was 6·56 seers a rupee against 6·72 seers in the preceding week and that of maize was 7·48 seers against 7·76 seers in the preceding week. Cattle disease is reported from seven districts. The condition of standing crops in the Feudatory States of Orissa and Chota Nagpur is good.

United Provinces.—During the week good rain fell in Garhwal and Tehri State and a little elsewhere. Preparation of lands for extra crops and sugarcane continues in some districts. Irrigation of spring crops and pressing of sugarcane continue. Standing crops are doing well. Prospects are favourable. The condition of agricultural stock is satisfactory. Fodder, water and market supplies are sufficient. Prices are generally stationary.

Punjab.—During the week light rain fell in parts of one district and was useful. Rain is wanted for standing spring crops which are generally good on irrigated and average on unirrigated areas. Picking of cotton and pressing of sugarcane continue. The yield is below normal to normal. Spring crops are being sown in some districts. The area sown is generally normal. Harvesting of toria continues. The yield is below normal to normal. Cattle are healthy and fodder and water are generally sufficient. Prices are generally stationary and above scarcity rates. Price of wheat :—Rawalpindi 5¾, Ferozepore 6, Ambala 6¼ and Lahore and Lyallpur 6¼ seers per rupee.

Picking of cotton continues in a few places. The condition of agricultural stock is good except in the district of Kotah where cattle disease prevails. Water and fodder are ample. Prices are generally steady.

Central India.—No rain fell during the week. Harvesting of autumn crops is nearing completion. Sowings for spring crops have been completed. Picking of cotton continues in Gwalior, Indore, Bhopal and the Southern States. Standing crops and their probable outturn are fair to good. MEMORANDUM ON THE PROBABLE CHARACTER OF THE WEATHER IN NORTHWEST INDIA IN JANUARY AND FEBRUARY 1920.

DATA OF RECENT WEATHER.

(a) The retreat of the monsoon.—The monsoon retreated from northwest India on the 4th September—about ten days before the usual time. Over the rest of the country the rainfall was on the whole below normal in October, except in Central India and the Central Provinces, and above normal generally in November. In December rainfall was heavier than usual in Madras and Burma. The monsoon has not yet retreated from southern India.

(b) The conditions in Persia and northwest India.—Weather was extremely dry in Persia in October and November. In December several disturbances of the cold weather type passed into northern India giving rain in very large excess in the Punjab and the North-West Frontier Province, large excess in Persia, Sind and the United Provinces West, and slight excess in Baluchistan, Kashmir and Rajputana. Snowfall began about the usual time in Kashmir; and the fall there as well as in the North-West Frontier Province was much above the average. Snowfall was normal or in slight defect in the Punjab hills, and in slight excess in the Kumaon hills.

(c) The seasonal changes in the upper air in northern India.—Before October the winds at heights of about six miles are as a rule of moderate strength but before the end of November they have increased to eighty miles an hour. This year these high winds were established at Agra by the middle of November, somewhat later than usual.

DISCUSSION.

2. The depressions from Europe which bring the winter rains of northwest India were much less active than usual in November last in the western regions where their strength can be estimated, and in northwest India the precipitation was much lighter than usual in the first half of December; but since then the rainfall and snowfall have been so great that the total for December has been in general in moderate or large excess. This lateness in the setting in of winter conditions has been associated, as usual, with delay in the establishment of the strong upper winds at Agra and delay in the retreat of the monsoon from southern India.

3. There is a marked tendency towards persistence in the character of the winter, so that the weather of December is likely to afford an indication of that in January and February; and the inference from the previous data is that in the approaching winter there will be appreciably more rain and snow than usual. But experience shows that the persistence is not complete enough to give an accurate measure, and a winter precipitation either normal or in large excess is almost as likely as one in moderate excess.

SUMMARY.

The total rainfall of northwest India in January and February and the snowfall on the neighbouring hills is likely to be normal or in excess.

REPORT ON THE OPERATIONS OF THE CURRENCY DEPARTMENT DURING THE YEAR 1918-19.

From—M. M. S. GUBBAY, ESQ., C.S.I., C.I.E., I.C.S., Controller of Currency,

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Finance Department, Simla.

SIR,

I have the honour to submit my report on the operations of the Currency Department, on the movement of funds, and on the resource operations of the Government of India for the year 1918-19.

It will be convenient for the purpose of a summary introduction to the history of the financial and currency events of the year to distinguish between the period preceding the armistice and the months succeeding the termination of hostilities, though, of course, it is to be understood that this distinction cannot be pressed too far, for there are many factors common to both periods. The year opened under the shadow of the great crisis caused by the final German offensive in the spring. To help to meet this crisis a call was made on India for an increase of her efforts in the supply of men and material. The first few months of the year thus witnessed great activity in the export of Indian goods and produce required for the prosecution of the war, thereby adding to the difficulties which previous reports have noticed as attending the financing of India's export trade. At the same time larger demands on the Government's financial resources arising not only out of the increased supply of men and material but also in connection with the financing of military operations which were extending to new areas materially intensified the strain to which the Indian financial system has been exposed by reason of the obligations undertaken by the Indian Government on behalf of His Majesty's Government. The position during those months was thus one of considerable tension, and superimposed on the anxieties connected with the financing of the Government and trade requirements there arose yet another cause for apprehension in the breaking out of an unprecedented silver crisis. The generous and ready assistance extended by the American Government through the release of the silver dollars in their Reserve materially helped in overcoming that crisis, but, as will be observed from a later section of the report where the events connected therewith are described at greater length, the position at the end of the year still remained one of considerable anxiety and uncertainty. Introductory.

The second period was marked by a decline of activity in the export trade and a consequent weakness in exchange. The possibility of such a decline was indicated by the occurrence of a weak south-western monsoon. This pointed to a probable contraction in the shipments of cereals and foodstuffs, and ultimately resulted in the taking of measures to prevent the outflow from India of foodstuffs, stocks of which had been depleted by the heavy shipments in the preceding 18 months to which reference was made in my report for 1917-18. It is, however, doubtful whether the indifferent agricultural outlook would by itself have caused so marked a depression in trade activity as to give rise to any apprehension as to India's trade transactions showing an excess of exports over imports. But when by the middle of October the military situation in the Near East foreshadowed an early collapse of the enemy's opposition, there arose certain anticipations as to the future course of the import and export trades. Prices, particularly of cotton, began to fall; the cloth market showed certain indications of collapse consequent on the reduction in the price of raw material; while, generally, the substitution of unknown peace possibilities for a continuation of profitable war conditions brought about considerable hesitation and uncertainty. For the first time since August 1915 the demand for trade remittances to India ceased, and from the end of October to the end of the financial year there were no sales by the Secretary of State of Council bills; on the contrary, it was found necessary in November to resume the sales of sterling drafts on London in order to support exchange at the level to which, consequent on the conclusion of the negotiations with the American Government, it had been raised in April.

Nevertheless, as will appear from the next succeeding section, the year's transactions ended in a substantial balance in favour of India. As in the previous year, the adjustment of the finance required to meet the excess of exports over imports was to a very large extent provided by Government, for the restrictions on the movement to India of the precious metals were drastically maintained. Imports of silver and gold were unprecedentedly low. The strain on the financial and currency mechanism was accordingly no less marked than in 1917-18, for Government's disbursements continued on a scale exceeding that of the previous year, while the activity of the export trade, which was largely of a war character, necessitated the adoption of abnormal measures. These included the issue of Treasury Bills and of a Second Indian War Loan, resulting in a net addition of $55\frac{1}{2}$ crores to the floating and permanent debt of the Government of India; the purchase in the open market of $22\frac{1}{2}$ crores of silver; the acquisition, under arrangements with the United States Government, of silver of which $50\frac{3}{4}$ crores were brought to account during the year; and, finally, the issue of currency notes against investments to the value of 31 crores in British Treasury Bills and of 6 crores in India Treasury Bills.

Following the model of previous reports the present report will in the first section deal with India's foreign trade, the imports and exports of precious metals and the methods whereby the balance of exports over imports was financed. The second and third sections deal with the price of silver, Exchange and Council bills. In the fourth section an account will be found of the financial transactions of Government leading to a review in the fifth section of the money conditions in India and of the Government's relations with the Presidency Banks. The demand for the various forms of currency is treated in the sixth section where also will be found a detailed account of the events connected with the currency crisis referred to above. Finally in the last two sections the usual statistics of the note circulation and miscellaneous matters connected with currency notes are discussed.

I.—India's Foreign Trade.

Statistics of Foreign trade.

2. The statement below gives, in the form adopted in former reports, a summarised record of the statistics of India's foreign trade in 1918-19 and in the preceding eight years, as also of some other transactions in the same period which are usually taken into account in estimating the trade balance. Certain adjustments are, for reasons which will be explained in paragraphs 6 and 7 below, necessary in the trade figures of the exports of gold and silver, and the adjusted figures for the year under report and for each of the three preceding years are shown in italics below.

3. A detailed exposition of the trade statistics of the year does not fall within the scope of this report and will be found in the Review of Trade published by the Director of Statistics; it will be sufficient to refer here briefly to the salient features of the year's foreign trade in their relation to the currency and exchange problems of the year. In the year under report India exported goods to the value of nearly 254 crores. Indian produce and merchandise accounted for slightly over 239¼ crores of this value, re-exports of foreign merchandise, returned at over 14½ crores, having been unusually large. In exchange India received from other countries goods to the value of 169 crores, so that the excess of exports of private merchandise over imports of the same was just under 85 crores. This excess, though substantially smaller than that recorded in the two preceding years, compares very closely with the excess recorded in the three years from 1910-11 to 1912-13. Under normal conditions, as indeed in the three years just mentioned, such an excess would have been adjusted, to a large extent, by importations of the precious metals on private account. But, for reasons which have been explained at length in previous reports, the normal method of liquidating the debts due to India could in the year under report, as in the preceding three years, not be brought into play. Indeed, the adjusted figures of the imports of gold and silver on private account disclose an insignificant net import of gold and silver, respectively, of 2 lakhs and 6 lakhs. Due weight must be given to this absence of any import of the precious metals in any critical discussion of the absorption of metallic currency during the year and I refer to this factor in greater detail in a subsequent paragraph.

The effect of the restrictions on the movements of the precious metals has been, as was explained in my report for 1917-18, to throw a great share of the burden of financing exports on the alternative method whereby for the assistance of the export trade the Government releases funds in India against payment in London. Council Bills were accordingly sold to the extent of 30,91 lakhs, but in computing the net effect of this method of importing funds into India, account must be taken of the sales of sterling drafts on London; for these operate to reduce the net balance of such imports. As will be explained in a subsequent paragraph, a demand for these drafts set in in October 1918 when a collapse of the enemy's resistance seemed imminent as a result of the defection of Bulgaria, Turkey and Austria. The sales of these drafts amounted to over 7 crores, so that the net import of funds into India by means of Council Bills was reduced to 23,83 lakhs.

Finally there was a comparatively insignificant export of 70 lakhs of Government securities. The net result, then, is that the apparent balance in favour of India, as disclosed by striking a balance between the items which are taken into account in the statement above, was no less than 61,69 lakhs, a figure without precedent in the period covered by this statement. As a matter of fact, we shall find, when we take into consideration other factors, such as the release of rupee funds by Government by methods other than Councils, and the invisible imports, that this very large figure must be substantially reduced.

Exports

4. Of the exports valued at Rs. 253·85 crores, shipments of Indian merchandise were valued at Rs. 239·29 crores. The pride of place falls this year to raw jute and jute manufactures shipments of which were valued at the record figure of 65,37 lakhs. Quantitatively the largest increase here is in raw jute, shipments of which expanded by 40 per cent., their value being nearly double that of the shipments of the previous year. Prices of raw jute, partly as a result of a shorter crop, and partly, too, in anticipation of a large world demand on the conclusion of hostilities, showed a remarkable advance. Shipment of jute goods in spite of an increase in value of 23 per cent. were, quantitatively, materially smaller than in the previous year; the yardage of gunny cloth showing a decline of 8 per cent., and the number of bags of 6 per cent. The next important group, falling, however, a long way behind the exports of jute and jute goods, is that represented by cotton and cotton manufactures of which shipments were valued at Rs. 45,10 lakhs, representing a decrease of nearly 11 crores as compared with the shipments of 1917-18. The decrease occurs almost wholly under raw cotton; for cotton twist, yarn and manufactures were returned at a slightly higher figure. Whereas in the case of raw jute the anticipation of a termination of hostilities helped to harden prices, in the case of raw cotton the effect was just in the opposite direction and the break in prices in November and December which continued till the end of the financial year accounts for the decline in the shipments in that period. Shipments of grain, pulse and flour, were profoundly affected by the failure of the south-west monsoon in June to September, which resulted in a practical loss of the kharif crops over a large area, and necessitated the imposition of severe restrictions on the shipments of wheat, rice and all food grains to foreign destinations. Exports of grain, pulse and flour fell by 34 per cent. to 40,07 lakhs, rice alone showing an increase; wheat shipments tailed off to just over 476,000 tons as against an export of nearly 1,500,000 tons in 1917-18, while equally marked reductions are observed in those of barley, gram and pulse. Tea (17,77 lakhs), seeds (11,22 lakhs), hides and skins, raw and tanned, (19,01 lakhs), were the remaining most important individual items. Of these seeds and hides and skins show substantial advances on the exports of the preceding year.

Imports.

5. Imports were valued at 169·03 crores. Though this figure represents an increase of over eighteen per cent on the aggregate value of imports in 1917-18, it is probably the case that the volume of imports was substantially smaller than in the preceding year. Thus, taking the important head of yarns and textile fabrics, which represent no less than 40 per cent. of the value of imports, a quantitative decline of nearly 30 per cent. is recorded under cotton piece-goods, of 50 per cent. under woollen piece-goods, and of 10 per cent. under silk piece-goods; yet the total group returns an increase in value of 15 per cent. Metals, iron and steel and manufactures thereof, show an increase of 60 per cent. in value, and a quantitative increase of 30 per cent. Imports of sugar on the other hand expanded in value by 2 per cent. and in quantity by 3 per cent. As has been remarked in previous reports an advance in prices in the case of imported articles has the effect of retarding and impeding the return of silver from up country by reducing the demand for these goods.

Imports and exports of treasure. Gold.

6. Certain adjustments are necessary in the figures of the net imports of treasure as disclosed by the statistical returns. These show the net exports of gold bullion at 2,49 lakhs, but this figure includes certain import and export transactions on behalf of the Bank of England which do not enter into India's trade account. With these excluded the value of the net import of gold bullion into India was 2 lakhs.

Silver.

7. The table in the margin shows the monthly imports and exports of silver on private account as furnished by the Statistical Department. There was an apparent net import of 1,02 lakhs, but the gross imports include 1,14 lakhs of dollar silver sent by the Straits Government for re-coinage at the Bombay Mint, while the exports represent 12 lakhs of re-coined dollars shipped to the Straits Government, and 6 lakhs worth of silver coin minted for the Egyptian Government at the Bombay Mint. These imports and exports do not affect the balance of trade. With these excluded there was, therefore, during the year under report, an import of 6 lakhs of silver only.

The adjustment of the trade balance.

8. I now proceed to discuss the methods whereby the excess of exports over imports in the year under review was adjusted. A correction is necessary, as explained in the preceding paragraphs, in the figures published by the Department of Statistics of the imports and exports of treasure and a further adjustment is necessary for reasons which have been explained in paragraph 4 of Appendix I of Mr. Howard's report for 1913-14 in the trade figures of the imports of Railway plant and rolling stock. With these corrections the net trade balance in favour of India in 1918-19 amounted to just over 85¾ crores, arrived at as follows:—

	Lakhs.
Net exports of merchandise	85,86
Net imports of treasure	8
Balance .	85,78

This figure represents the value of exports which was not liquidated by the shipment of goods or treasure to India. It is now necessary to consider the methods whereby foreign consumers of Indian goods were able to effect payment otherwise than by shipping to India goods or gold or silver. In addition, India exported 70 lakhs worth more of Government securities than she imported and this amount must be added to the balance in her favour which had to be liquidated.

Remittance through Government.

9. A considerable portion of the funds required for the purpose of financing these exports was found through the agency of Government. As in the previous year so in 1918-19 the necessity for selling Council Bills arose not from any requirement by the Secretary of State for additions to his sterling resources but simply from the insistent demand from the trade for finance for exports. To meet this demand there were sold in the year under review 30,91 lakhs of Council Bills but for the purposes of the adjustment of the balance of trade this amount must be reduced as explained in paragraph 3 above by the amount of sterling drafts sold on London. The net amount then of rupees thus released by Government through Councils was 23,83 lakhs.

The remittance of funds to India through Councils is, however, only one of the methods whereby, during the year under review, finance was found through Government agency in connection with exports. Remittances through the Post Office by means of postal money orders, though not as abnormally heavy as in the previous year, resulted in the disbursement from Indian treasuries of 4,96 lakhs. Under arrangements with certain Colonial Administrations, mainly on behalf of East Africa, various sums, amounting in all to 4,32 lakhs, were paid out by the Indian Treasury to Banks or firms in India to provide funds for the payment of goods exported to those destinations, repayment being made to the Secretary of State in London. Payments in India on behalf of the Federal Reserve Board of New York under the arrangements described in paragraph 10 of my report of 1917-18 amounted to 16 crores. Telegraphic transfers drawn on India from Persia and Mesopotamia totalled 15,56 lakhs. Once again, as in the preceding year, not an inconsiderable portion of the exports to Australia was financed from rupees paid out by Government in discharge of bills drawn on them against stores or Australian produce purchased on their behalf for the use of their troops, and as these stores do not, because they were imported on Government account, appear in the trade statistics, while the exports shipped from India in exchange of these imports are so included, these transactions must be specially accounted for; the payments in India for this purpose amounted to 3,77 lakhs. In the aggregate, then, the amount of the funds released by the Government in India in favour of the trade against payment outside India amounted to 44$\frac{2}{3}$ crores: and this figure must be added to the net amount, namely 23,83, lakhs which was remitted to India through Council Bills. The remittances of funds to India through Government agency thus totalled 68$\frac{1}{2}$ crores and served to adjust the excess of exports over imports which, as shown above, amounted to 86·48 crores. The balance namely 18 crores, in so far as it was not adjusted by invisible imports, represents the credits in foreign countries due to India on private account.

Private Remittances. 10. The invisible imports are, of course, not susceptible of an approximate estimate, even under normal conditions, and are even more difficult to gauge when a fluctuating exchange with the attendant possibility of a higher sterling equivalent disturbs the normal flow of remittance homewards on private account. Normally, as has been explained in previous reports there is a demand for sterling from firms and individuals who have payments to make abroad for such purposes as investment, payment of dividends, profits, and insurances, home charges, etc. Such remittances will naturally pass through the hands of the Exchange Bank in whose returns they appear as sales of sterling. As I explained in paragraph 11 of my report for 1917-18 the six British Exchange Banks whose operations have since 1917 been regulated by a working agreement with the Secretary of State furnish to Government certain returns of their transactions in sterling; and it is possible from these returns to gauge the tendency, and, very roughly, the extent, of these private remittances. In the first six months of the year the sales of sterling of these six Banks fell short of their purchases by over £12 millions: in the second half the sales exceeded the purchases by over £10 millions. Even more striking is the variation in the sales of sterling in the two half-yearly periods: the sales in the second half exceeded the sales in the first half by nearly £14$\frac{1}{2}$ millions. If the transactions of these six Banks can be regarded as an index of those of all Exchange Banks, it is a reasonable inference that, as was surmised in my report for 1917-18, private remittances have not in recent years served to the same extent as under normal conditions to finance the excess of exports over imports and that there is a substantial balance in India's favour which has still to be liquidated.

II.—Price of Silver.

Price of Silver.

11. I give in the margin the highest and lowest as well as the average quotations in London and New York of silver in each month of the year. The history of the year's silver prices can be very briefly summarised. It was only during the first three weeks of April that there was any open market in silver: for, with the passage into law on April the 22nd of the Pittman Act a 'control' basic price of 1 dollar per ounce fine was established. Such fluctuations as the marginal statement discloses arise from reductions in freight and insurance. The control basic price was raised to 101½ cents per ounce on August the 16th, the increase representing Mint and certain other charges involved in the breaking down of the United States dollars for delivery to India and other countries admitted to the benefit of the scheme for the utilisation of the dollar reserves of the United States of America.

The London price of silver was stabilised by a Treasury regulation dated the 9th August and published on the 13th idem under the Defence of the Realm Act, fixing a maximum of 48⅞d., which was, for the reasons already mentioned, subsequently raised to 49½d. per standard ounce. The enhancement on the 28th March 1919 of this rate to 50d. followed on the 'unpegging' of the London—New York exchange, the Treasury regulation being amended so as to provide that the maximum price for silver in London should be the equivalent of 101½ cents at the current rate of exchange for the day.

As I explained in paragraph 13 of my report for 1917-18, the fluctuations in the price of silver in the Indian bullion market have since the closing down of imports into and exports from India, followed a course of their own and do not now reflect the tendencies outside India. The highest point reached for foreign bar silver in the year namely Rs. 117-2 ex duty was recorded on the 6th May, and the lowest Rs. 82-10 on the 28th November. Throughout October, November and December the price re-acted to the poorness of the agricultural outlook; but subsequently recovered. From the currency point of view greater significance attaches to the price of country silver, as when this price rises substantially above Rs. 109 per 100 tolas the melting of rupees becomes theoretically a profitable transaction. Country silver was sold at above the rupee melting point until the end of September when supplies began to come down to the Bombay market and the price fell, steadily reaching its lowest point in November. Thereafter, as in the case of foreign silver, there was a recovery in the price; and at the close of the year country silver was quoted at Rs. 113.

The rupee coinage of the year amounted to 50,79 lakhs involving 190½ million ounces of standard silver. In addition to the silver obtained from America under the Pittman Act, there were purchased in America 59 million ounces, in Australia 9 million ounces and from the East 8 million ounces. The Bawdwin mines of which the output is under arrangement between the Secretary of State and the Burma Mines Company entirely reserved for the use of the Government of India supplied 2 million ounces.

III.—Exchange and Councils.

Council Drawings.

12. As has already been observed, the first six months of the year saw a strong demand for rupee exchange, and this demand is reflected in the monthly figures, quoted in the margin, of the sales of Council Bills. These sales were limited to the period from April to November, for, as already explained, with the cessation of hostilities, the demand for Councils ceased towards the end of October, and no sales took place in the later months of the year. The aggregate payments of the year reached the figure of 30,91 lakhs—a figure considerably smaller than that reached in 1917-18.

[In lakhs of Rs.]

	Drawings.	Payments.
April . . .	4.95	4,35
May . . .	6,00	5,98
June . . .	5.22	5,09
July . . .	5,35	5,75

September . .	2.26	2,18
October . . .	1,74	2,59
November . .	3	14
	28,65	30.91

The year opened with a weekly allotment of 60 lakhs: this allotment was maintained until the 2nd August, when for two weeks the allotment was reduced to 40 lakhs, and, subsequently, to 30 lakhs till with effect from the 22nd October the regular weekly sales were discontinued. The total amount of the regular weekly sales was 15,50 lakhs. In addition there were allotted, at different times and in some cases for continued periods during this year, special councils as follows :—

	Lakhs.
(i) For the financing of the Royal Commission's wheat and rice export bills.	4,21
(ii) For the financing of exports of tea from Ceylon . . .	1,82
(iii) For military and other disbursements in connection with Persia	1,91½
(iv) For the purpose of liquidating the overbought positions of the Exchange Banks (493½) and the Bank of Bengal (7½).	5,01

No comment is called for with reference to the first three items just mentioned. The fourth item calls for explanation. Under an agreement with the Secretary of State, the six British Exchange Banks undertook to devote their resources to the fullest extent possible to the financing of war exports, and in return received a guarantee that such funds as might in discharge of this undertaking be transferred to London in excess of remittances in the opposite direction would be retransferred to India through Council Bills at the rate at which the overbuying had taken place. A beginning was made in the year under review of the retransfer to India of the funds so transferred by the Exchange Banks; and Council Bills to the extent of 493½ lakhs were accordingly sold. These, however, were paid to the Exchange Banks in the form of 12 months Treasury Bills to be renewed till a year from the signing of peace had elapsed but the Banks were allowed the option to tender these bills in payment of their subscription to the Loan.

Reverse Councils

13. From October 1918 till the end of the year the demand for rupees was not in excess of the supply of rupees which the trade and others were seeking to convert into foreign currency, so that the Banks found it unnecessary to resort to Council Bills to supply themselves with rupee exchange. On the contrary the flow of rupees seeking conversion into sterling currency was such as to cause a demand for Reverse Councils. These were first sold on November the 14th when against an offer of £1 million tenders to the amount of £4,870,000 were received. The offer was consequently raised to £2 millions and remained at that figure for two weeks, being reduced on the 5th December to £1 million. The total amount of Sterling sold from the 14th November 1918 to the 31st March 1919 was £5,315,000 distributed as shown below.

(In thousands £.)

14. The year opened with a rate of 1*s*. $4\frac{29}{32}$d. for Deferred and 1*s*. 5*d*. for Immediate transfers. These rates were in force until the 11th April when, as a result of the agreement with the United States of America for the release of the Dollar Reserve silver, they were advanced respectively to 1*s*. $5\frac{29}{32}$d. and 1*s*. 6*d*. These rates remained in force until the close of the year. Rate of Exchange.

The rates for Reverse Drafts on London were fixed at 1*s*. $6\frac{1}{32}$d. for Deferreds and 1*s*. $5\frac{31}{32}$d. for Immediates from the 11th April.

IV.—The Government Balances and Reserves. Ways and Means.

15. The usual details regarding the Treasury Balances, the Gold Standard and the Paper Currency Reserves will be found in Statements Nos. I and II appended to the Report. A summary of these details is given in the following table which sets out the amounts and the distribution of these balances at the commencement and the close of the year and also at the end of September 1918.

16. The above figures give a general indication of the effect on the resources of the Government of India of their ways and means operations of the year. The main features of these will be best appreciated by the following very brief summary of the transactions of the year. Outgoings amounted to just over 236 crores accounted for mainly as follows :— Indian ways and means transactions.

and the finance for these transactions was provided for in the following ways.

A full account of the Indian ways and means operations of the year has been given in paragraphs 26 to 30 of the Narrative of the Hon'ble Finance Member introducing the Financial Statement for 1919-20, and I need here only refer very briefly to a few of the items in the above summary. The payments, amounting to 16 crores, on behalf of the Federal Reserve Board of New York, served a twofold purpose. In the first place, as already explained in paragraph 9 above, they operated to release Government funds for the assistance of trade : and in the second place the dollar equivalents thereof were applied towards the liquidations of the sums due to the United States Treasury for the silver transferred to the Government of India under the Pittman Act. In addition, as shewn in item (f) above a remittance of 3,08 lakhs in gold was made to America for the same purpose. It will also be noticed from paragraph 19 that a sum of £24 millions was paid from the Home balances by the Secretary of State to His Majesty's Government in further discharge of the payments due to the United States Treasury in the same connection. In all, then, by the end of the financial year, there were paid £30¾ millions towards the cost of the Pittman silver, while, on the other hand, the amount of such silver for which credit has been taken in the year's account, amounts to Rs. 50·81 crores.

Mention should also be made here, of the Ways and Means advances from the Presidency Banks. These transactions consist (1) of a loan of 4 crores from the Bank of Bombay taken in the previous year which was finally discharged in the year under review and (2) of loans of 10½ crores from the Bank of Bombay and of 7 crores from the Bank of Bengal in the current year. These latter were liquidated before the beginning of the busy season.

Indian Treasury Bills.

17. It will also be convenient to deal at this stage with the more important statistics and features connected with Treasury Bills. Save for the two and half months from June to the middle of September when the loan operations were in progress, recourse was had to the sales of these Bills for ways and means purposes and I give below the monthly figures of sales and discharges.

The total sales to the public amounted to Rs. 87,09,05,000, while there were discharged Bills amounting to Rs. 87,19,75,000,—the result being a small net discharge of about 11 lakhs. On the 31st March 1919 there were out-standing about 43½ crores of Treasury Bills. These exclude twelve months' bills of the nominal value of 6,40 lakhs issued to the Paper Currency Reserve as explained in paragraph 28 of the Narrative of the Hon'ble Finance Member.

Treasury Balances in England

18. The transactions in England will, of course, be largely a counterpart of the Indian transactions. The year opened with a balance in the Home Treasury of £10,625,000 which gradually increased till by the end of May it had reached over £16,660,000. Thereafter, mainly on account of the payments for the Pittman silver, payments in connection with India's financial contribution to the war, and the drawings from India on account of Reverse Councils the balance fell till at the close of the year it stood at £8,700,000. The lowest point reached, viz., £6,307,000 was at the end of October.

19. In Statement II appended to this report will be found a summary of the cash transactions of the Secretary of State. The net sterling charges against revenue amounted to £20⅝ millions while capital transactions resulted in the discharge of debt amounting to £2,031,900. The purchase of silver resulted in disbursements of £43,686,700, of which £24,037,900 represent payments for Pittman silver. Payments to His Majesty's Treasury on account of India's financial contribution to the war amounted to £33,415,000. Towards the financing of these transactions the Home Treasury received £82,879,600 on account of disbursements in connection with the war made in India while the net sterling proceeds of the sale of Council drafts, after deduction of the payments on account of sterling drafts drawn from India during the period of weak exchange referred to in paragraph 13 above yielded £15,811,300.

Paper Currency Reserve.

20. The silver balance in the Paper Currency Reserve fluctuated greatly during the year and the history of the events connected with these fluctuations is detailed in the section of this Report which deals with the absorption of rupees.

The year opened with a silver balance of about £7·2 millions, bullion included. With the promulgation of Ordinance I of 1918 on the 15th April, subsequently re-enacted as Act XII of 1918, it became possible to hold as part of the Currency Reserve silver held by the Secretary of State in America or in transit therefrom. The resulting effect was to increase the silver balances which at the end of April stood at £9·15 millions. The improvement thus shown was maintained throughout May which closed with a balance of £10·37 millions; but June saw a relapse, the balance falling to £9·96 millions at the end of that month. Thereafter with the continuous large transfer of the Pittman silver, the silver balance showed further increases till at the close of the year it stood at £24·93 millions.

The gold balance of the Paper Currency Reserve on the opening day of the year was £17·9 millions, but fell to £11·58 millions at the end of the year. The reduction was due to the following causes. There issued principally in connection with the wheat and cotton crops, to supplement the shortage of silver coin £3 millions, while exchanges with Native States of gold for silver amounted to a further £·6 millions. As already explained, a remittance of £2 millions was made to America in part payment for the Pittman silver, while gold to the extent of £·37 million was released at Home in exchange for silver received from His Majesty's Treasury.

The securities held in the Paper Currency Reserve increased from £40·98 millions to £65·72 millions and, save in respect of £1·05 millions invested in Indian Treasury Bills, the additions were all in the form of British Treasury Bills. These additional investments were authorised by Act VI of 1918 and Act II of 1919, raising in all to £66·67 millions the total amount of admissible investment. Consols of the nominal value of £1·63 millions were sold during the year and the sale proceeds supplemented by transfers from the Depreciation Fund were invested in British Treasury Bills. Details of the composition of the Reserve will be found in Statement III.

The Gold Standard Reserve.

21. The fluctuations in the Gold Standard Reserve resulted in an increase in the holding of securities from £28,153,000 to £29,729,000. This increase was solely due to the accumulation of interest on the securities held in the Reserve, as there was no transfer to it as profit on coinage. Details of the balance in the Reserve and of the securities held therein will be found in Statement XXII.

V.—The Presidency Banks and Money conditions in India.

22. Conditions in the money market during the year under report were in many respects similar to those described in paragraph 22 of my report for 1917-18. The Government was again, as will have been gathered from the previous section, continuously in the market as a borrower, first through Treasury Bills, then through the Second Indian War Loan, and finally, on the closure of the Loan, again through Treasury Bills; while a new feature is to be found in the large Ways and Means borrowings from the Presidency Banks in July and August. Nevertheless there was again as in 1917-18, a marked steadiness in the Bank rate; for the borrowings by Government were returned almost at once to the market through the heavy expenditure connected directly with the war and through the disbursements by Government in the form of Council Bills and other remittances required for trade purposes. I ought, however, to notice at this stage that there were observable signs of slackening in the rapidity with which the sums disbursed by Government were again returned to the market. This slackening was more observable in the latter half of the year, when after the conclusion of hostilities, a period of uncertainty set in. Among the causes to which may be attributed the absence of stringency in the money market there should probably be included the control exercised by Government on fresh capital issues. This control was maintained through the operation of Act XII of 1918 which required the previous sanction of the Government of India to any new flotation, and to the public issue of new shares and debenture capital by any existing joint stock company. Such sanction was ordinarily granted in cases when it was shown that the new or enlarged venture was directly connected with industrial enterprises likely to assist in the production of goods required for the prosecution of the war.

On the other hand, as will be observed from a later paragraph, the cash balances of the Presidency Banks were throughout the year markedly lower than in the previous year. In explanation of this contrast it should be observed that there were no large importations of gold such as, as explained in paragraph 24 of my report for 1917-18, helped to swell the cash balances of the Exchange Banks, and, through them, the balances of the Presidency Banks.

23. The following table gives the usual statistics of the Government balances at each of the three Presidency Banks on the last day of each month of the last three years, and I have added to the statement a column to show the statistics of the balances in Reserve Treasuries on the same dates :— Government Balances at the Presidency Banks.

Attention will be directed to the low average of Government funds in Reserve Treasuries. As a result of the policy, referred to in paragraph 23 of my report for 1917-18 of placing with the Presidency Banks Government balances to the largest possible extent, the year in question saw a reduction in the average amount retained in the Reserve Treasuries to just under 2 crores : while the average of the Government balances left with the Presidency Banks amounted to 10,30 lakhs. Generally speaking, Treasury balances in 1918-19 were on the whole lower than in 1917-18, particularly in the months of June, July and August and it is this cause which accounts for the lower average retained in 1918-19 with the Presidency Banks. So far as the Reserve Treasury balances are concerned, these are probably not capable of further reduction, for they are needed for resource operations with district Treasuries where no Branch of a Presidency Bank is yet in existence, and it ought to be observed that the business of transferring to the Presidency Banks the main portion of the balances in Reserve Treasuries has been facilitated by the arrangements now in existence under which the sales of Council Bills by the Secretary of State are subject to a fixed limit of amount. A return to the normal system of sales of Councils, and of ' Specials, ' might conceivably necessitate a reversion to the previous practice of retaining in Reserve Treasuries a larger amount of the Government funds unless, of course, there should, in the meantime, come about a development and expansion of the Presidency Banks' banking system.

Cash Balances of the Presidency Banks.

24. Among other advantages which have resulted from the policy of retaining the bulk of the Government funds with the Presidency Banks has been the stabilisation of money rates. This result has also been furthered by the sale, continuously throughout the year, save during the Loan operations, of Treasury Bills. This aspect of the case was referred to in paragraphs 23 and 24 of my report for 1917-18 and the progress of events during the year under report affords further illustration of this tendency. I give, in the first place, the usual statement of the cash balances of the three Presidency Banks in the last week of each month of the year.

I have already referred to the main cause accounting for the diminution in the cash balances of the Banks throughout the year, as compared with the corresponding dates in 1917-18. The monthly fluctuations were due to the usual seasonal causes. In April and May there was a strong demand for cash in Bombay in connection with the financing of the Broach cotton crop : and to meet this demand, and to obviate its reacting on money conditions generally, Government funds were during this period transferred to a considerable extent to that centre. April maturities of Treasury bills in Bombay were specially heavy, the trade having obviously invested in three months' bills in the earlier part of the year, so as to make full use of their resources at a time when they were not required for trading purposes, in the knowledge that these investments would be convertible into cash when the cotton crop came down. The wheat export season did not create the demand for finance which might have been expected partly because, owing to the currency difficulties, the requirements of the Royal Commission for wheat supplies were substantially reduced. Between June and August the cash balances of the three Banks showed the increase which is expected at a time of slackness. The demand for finance in connection with jute is reflected in the drop in the cash balances of the Bank of Bengal in September: indeed from that month onwards, despite the unpromising agricultural outlook, there was a steady decline in the balances of the three Banks. High prices, and the great demand for foodstuffs in the areas affected by the failure of the monsoon no doubt account for these demands on the money market. In particular in the last three months of the year funds were in urgent demand for moving the Burma rice crop to Western India and Madras which were known to be largely dependent on this crop for their food. The financing of this crop is largely effected from Calcutta through the Bank of Bengal and to ease the strain on its resources that institution applied for and took a loan from Government on the 22nd January which was repaid a fortnight later.

Bank rate.

25. As regards Bank rates these were at 6 per cent at the beginning of the year, the rate at Madras being one per cent higher. The Banks of Bengal and Bombay reduced their rates to 5 per cent on the 23rd May and maintained them at this figure until the 7th November, when they were raised to 6 per cent and to 7 per cent on the 16th January.* The next variation was not till the 27th March when both these Banks brought their rates down to 6 per cent. The rate of the Bank of Madras was reduced to 6 per cent on the 5th August and rasied to 7 and 8 per cent on the 10th November and the 20th January respectively. The following table shows for each of the years 1917-18 and 1918-19 the maximum and the minimum rates of each of the Banks and the number of changes in the rate :—

Movement of funds (a) through Currency.

26. The movement of funds through Currency will appear from the following statement which shows the issue of Currency Transfers for each month of the year in each circle. There was a very marked expansion in these movements, the aggregate value of transfers having advanced from 39,19 lakhs to 55,13 lakhs. All circles except Rangoon share in the increase; and, as usual, the Bombay circle was the chief source from which funds were distributed to other centres.

(b) Through Treasury and Currency.

27. As will be seen from Statements IV and V, the total movement of funds through Government agency, i.e., through Treasuries as well as through Currency offices, amounted to just over 100 crores. Statement IV shows the movements between Provinces: these amounted to 59 crores. The transactions within the Provinces are shown in Statement V and amounted to 41 crores.

Clearing House figures.

28. There has been a remarkable expansion of over 40 per cent in the totals of the clearances through the Clearing House, as will appear from the statement below. All centres show an increase, the largest being returned at Calcutta. In any estimate of the development of banking which these figures indicate, it must not be overlooked that the statistics of cheque clearances have in recent years been greatly affected by payments in connection with the War Loans and Treasury Bills; these are features which may not be repeated to the same extent in the financial transactions of future years. Further I also imagine that the recent substitution of monthly for annual settlements in the Bombay Cotton market may have served to swell the totals recorded for that centre. Nevertheless after allowing for all these causes it is reasonable to infer from the continuously growing figures which the record of the past five years' transactions reveal that substantial progress is being made with the use of cheques.

The usual statistical details regarding the note circulation will be found in a subsequent section and, though in 1918-19 the normal seasonal interchange between these two circulating media was almost totally absent, a comparison of the absorption of silver and of notes still possesses significance.

Attention will at once be directed to the total absence of any reflow of rupees such as usually marks the slack season off from the busy season. Taking the weekly figures I may observe that in no fewer than 21 weeks the withdrawal of silver exceeded 1 crore and only in two weeks, viz., the last week of June and the last week of March was the withdrawal of rupees less than the receipts. Taking the absorption by circles, once again the Bombay and Karachi circles head the list with an absorption of 15,01 lakhs, the Lahore circle came next with an absorption of 13,93 lakhs. A long way behind will be found the Cawnpore circle with an absorption of 5,99 lakhs. The Calcutta circle with an absorption of 5,66 lakhs stands next, while as regards Madras and Burma these were content with a comparatively small absorption of 67 and 2,25 lakhs respectively. The total absorption in the year was thus 43,51 lakhs. This excludes the absorption through the treasuries which amounted to the very high figure of 1,51 lakhs during the year, it having been found necessary to reduce the whole rupee balance in the Treasuries to strengthen the Currency Reserve.

Absorption of metal.

32. I may perhaps at this stage insert a table which groups together for a period of 10 years the actual absorption of metal whether in the form of currency or bullion. The significance of the figures in this table will be at once apparent, for no critical discussion of the causes of the heavy absorption in the year and no estimate of the extent to which the issues of rupees in 1918-19 passed into hoards or into the melting pot can overlook the very important effect caused on a country accustomed to the consumption of precious metals by the restrictions imposed on the movement into India of gold and silver necessitated by war conditions.

* In additio [illegible] 18,27 lakhs of gold import [illegible]

If then we take together for a period of years the consumption in India of metal whether in the form of currency or bullion, we find that the abnormality represented by an absorption of over 45 crores is only apparent, for in 1911-12 and 1912-13 there was an even heavier absorption of bullion and currency while in 1909-10 the absorption of bullion and currency was comparable with that recorded in 1918-19. In 1918-19 the absorption in the form of currency was, it is true, considerably greater than in any previous year but the cause may be that owing to the inability of the community to obtain any other form of metal it resorted to the Currency Offices as the only source from which it could satiate its normal demand for gold and silver.

33. I now pass to a description of the very important events connected with the currency crisis of the year. It may at once be said that the possibility of such a crisis arising had been anticipated for some time and some of the remedial measures which it was thought possible to take in anticipation were referred to in paragraph 33 of my report for 1917-18. Nevertheless, it is at least doubtful whether any competent observer was prepared for the suddenness and extent of the crisis. The storm centre was in Bombay. On the re-opening of the Currency Office in April after the Easter holidays the silver balance at Bombay stood at 130 lakhs. Within 3 days this balance was reduced to 19 lakhs and it was clear that a crisis was imminent. It was staved off solely by the magnificient co-operation of the Mints and by the rapid transfer to that office of such surplus rupees as could be made available from Bengal and Central Provinces. Within 6 days no fewer than 187 lakhs were despatched from these areas to Bombay, while special measures were adopted at the Bombay Mint to accelerate the deliveries by dispensing with formalities. Simultaneously, however, difficulties arose in Madras and Rangoon. The former Currency Office closed on the 12th April with a balance of 1 lakh of silver after having issued 4 lakhs worth of sovereigns. In Rangoon actually on the same date one tenderer was refused silver. At both these places the situation was saved by the closing of offices on account of local holidays which rendered it possible to collect for issue thereat rupees lying at Treasuries and sub-Treasuries. At Calcutta, however, there was fortunately no trace of any abnormal developments. Doubtless the primary factor in the demand for silver at the time was the requirement of those engaged in the financing of the cotton crop and to a large extent at all times, and certainly at the outset almost entirely, the demand was legitimate and bonâ fide. It is, however, probably quite true that individual cotton traders being fully aware of the deficient stocks of silver were themselves anxious to make certain of the supplies which they needed and this anxiety must have been reflected in the demands made by them on the Currency Office. In explanation of this anxiety it must be remembered that a serious shortage of currency, though not previously unknown in Northern India was absolutely without precedent in Western India. The daily rise in the price of cotton again added to the anxiety of the trader to provide himself with the currency most acceptable to the seller. Nevertheless, these circumstances will not account entirely for the withdrawals at Bombay during the first fortnight in April for there were indications of panic encashment during this period. On the 11th April an abnormally large number of small tenderers presented themselves at the Currency Office to demand rupees. Rumours were abroad that the Government intended to close down the issues of silver with effect from the 15th April and the afternoon of the 12th April saw what looked very much like a run on the Currency Office. Matters were very much worse in this respect on the 13th April and it was not until the 16th that this excitement subsided. The position was complicated by the fact that the negotiations with America had reached a stage at which it was deemed inadvisable to permit any announcement being made and it was only natural that the public, who had only the bare record of the weekly currency statement to refer to and observed the regular and appreciable melting away of the silver metallic backing to the note issue, should have regarded the outlook as of the darkest and looked upon inconvertibility as imminent and unavoidable. The position, however, was distinctly relieved by the issue of the two communiqués on the 15th and 19th April. The first referred to the Ordinance which had just been promulgated and which made it possible for silver purchased in America and in transit therefrom to be included as belonging to the Paper Currency Reserve. The second definitely announced that legislation had been introduced in America to enable transfers to be made to India of part of the American Silver Reserve. As a result of the first communiqué the statutory statement showing the silver holding of the Paper Currency Reserve exhibited an immediate increase of 4½ crores and this addition to the silver balances made a distinctly favourable impression on the situation. The second, foreshadowing the acquisition by India of 150 million ounces, had an even more marked effect in removing the note of anxiety which had characterised earlier appreciations of the situation and of the prospects lying immediately ahead. It was now known that the arrivals of silver were merely a question of transport and, therefore, of time, and the outlook of those who were charged with the administration of the Currency Offices underwent a visible, if not conscious, change.

In May the position remained critical at all points and there was some deterioration at Calcutta which had hitherto shown no evidence whatever of any panic. The demand in this month was most intense at Lahore. The Punjab wheat season was then in full swing and the demand for currency to finance this crop was naturally strong. Moreover the Government wheat purchases were at that time paid for entirely with notes and the notes so disbursed very soon found their way back to the Currency Office for encashment. The operation of these two factors threw a great strain on the Currency Office. On the 20th May the drastic step was taken of prohibiting the carriage of specie by rail on private account. The immediate effect of this measure was to cause at first an almost complete stoppage of large issues at Lahore and Madras. A further restriction was shortly afterwards introduced in the form of a prohibition on the transmission of specie by post. This measure followed almost directly on the prohibition of the carriage by rail, for no sooner had the latter become known than Marwaris and traders proceeded to dump parcels of 440 tolas of silver at the post offices to be transmitted to destination. At one time at Bombay there were actually no fewer than 8 tons of such parcels awaiting despatch.

Meanwhile large quantities of silver amounting to 9,66 lakhs were on their way from America. Special measures were taken to expedite their transmission and a special ship, the R. I. M. "Northbrook" was despatched to meet the arrivals across the Pacific. Further relief was also provided by the issue of gold mohurs in part payment for the wheat purchases in the Punjab. The coinage of these gold pieces had begun in April when it was realised that the delay in the despatch to India of dies might result in the postponement until August of the issue of sovereigns coined in India.

Actually the lowest point reached in the silver coin balances was in the first week of June when these stood at 4,14 lakhs. On the 10th June the opening balance at the Currency Offices had fallen to 3½ lakhs in Calcutta, 2⅝ lakhs in Cawnpore, 12 lakhs at Lahore, 30 lakhs at Bombay, 19⅝ lakhs at Madras, and 10¾ lakhs in Rangoon The position was saved by the splendid work by the Mints. Also the fact was generally known to the public that enormous shipments of silver were arriving and wide publicity had been given in the press to the arrival of these reinforcements from America. The turn of the tide came in the third week of June when the Currency coin balance rose to 4,74 lakhs while the fourth week actually saw a return of 16 lakhs bringing the closing coin balance on the 30th of June up to 5,65 lakhs with silver under coinage at 2,78 lakhs and in transit at 6,51 lakhs.

The events from June onwards, though less sensational, did not really bring about an improvement in the position. The arrival of the American silver and the steady purchases by the Secretary of State removed anxiety on the score of bullion, but rupees flowed out almost as fast as bullion could be pushed through the Mints. The table in the margin shows the new coinage and the net absorption for each of the 12 months of the year. In July the issues at Bombay still averaged between three and six lakhs daily. At Lahore they were frequently from 5 to 6 lakhs. In August, however, the Bombay issues fell off but issues continued at Lahore and commenced at Calcutta which in the previous month had shown a net return of rupees of over a crore. In September the chief centre of absorption was in Calcutta. In October the position showed a deterioration due partly to the usual increase in issues which occurs at the close of the monsoon and partly to the fact that owing to the Puja holidays in Calcutta and the very serious influenza epidemic at Bombay the output at the Mints fell off considerably. In November all circles except Madras, Rangoon and Karachi, showed heavy issues and the absorption at Bombay began again to be on a large scale. In December the absorption was the highest on record, namely 6¼ crores and at Bombay no fewer than 53 lakhs were issued on one day alone.

34. As regards gold coin the absorption as indicated below amounted to 5,20 lakhs. The coin so absorbed consisted of 4,60 lakhs of sovereigns, and of the 60 lakhs of gold mohurs coined in India in the circumstances explained in the preceding paragraph. For the reasons stated in paragraph 33 of my report for 1917-18, it may be taken as reasonably certain that only a comparatively inconsiderable number of the sovereigns and of the gold mohurs so issued have remained in the currency of the country. There is, indeed, evidence to support the inference that many of the sovereigns have passed into the melting pot; and the rapid appreciation in the price of gold in India during the year lends further support to this conclusion. The scarcity value attaching to the gold coin must undoubtedly have led to its having changed hands as a commodity, in spite of the legal prohibition imposed by the Ordinance of the 22nd August 1918 on dealings in King's coin above its face value. Absorption of sovereigns and mohurs.

Currency gold coin was released between April and August, purely as an emergency measure, to supplement the shortage of silver coin. But in selecting the areas in which such gold coin should be issued, preference was naturally given to those districts in which a disposition to use gold coin as currency had in pre-war times manifested itself. The inset table gives the detailed absorption in each month, and distinguishes between the issues of sovereigns and mohurs. The absorption was largest in Bombay where, in the cotton districts of Gujarat, gold coin was issued in April and May to the amount of 2,83 lakhs. In Lahore the issues continued till August and amounted to 1,37 lakhs: and were made, as also in Cawnpore, essentially in connection with wheat purchases. The inconsiderable issues in Madras and Rangoon were emergency issues due to a local and temporary shortage of silver rupees.

It is difficult to gauge with any pretence to precision the effect of these issues of gold coin. Primarily, as I have already explained, they were designed to ensure that, pending the receipt and coinage of the silver expected or arriving from overseas, the convertibility of the note should be maintained; and there can be no doubt that in so far as this object was concerned, the issue of gold was completely effective, for without the addition to its coin resources, the Currency Department might have found itself in April, May and June unable to meet its legal obligations to pay out metal against notes tendered to it. But there have been indications in district officers' reports that not a little distrust was caused thereby. Certainly, in Gujarat, the discrimination which naturally had to be applied in these issues of gold coin was the cause of many complaints from those who were not entitled to receive payment in gold. That there should have been such complaints will cause no surprise; for the fortunate recipients of gold were thereby placed in a more favourable position than their less favoured competitors. This preference was, of course, enhanced as the premium which the gold coin fetched as a commodity advanced; and it is perhaps worth noticing in connection with the events of 1918-19 that, with the large and increasing value attaching to gold, the administrative and other disadvantages attaching to a limited issue of gold coin have assumed greater prominence.

Price of sovereigns and gold.

35. Sovereigns were quoted at the end of March 1918 at Rs. 16-7 and rose gradually in value till by the 30th May they were quoted at Rs. 20-4. It does not appear that the price reacted in April and May to the release of Currency gold coin as was the case in the previous year. Possibly the uncertainty of the military and currency situations tended to counteract the effects which the opening up of a new source of supply bring about in the price of a commodity of which the stock is limited. By the end of June, however, there was a relapse to Rs. 18-12 and the price fluctuated between Rs 19 and 20 till the issue of the notification prohibiting transactions in King's coin above face value made open dealings at any rate impossible.

From August onwards, therefore, the value of the sovereign can only be determined by the quotations for gold bullion. The price of gold bullion fell, after the issue of the notification just referred to, from Rs. 34 per tola to Rs. 30 but rose again in September to Rs. 32-4. At the close of the year the quotation was Rs. 32.

The new gold mohurs are reported to have changed hands at prices slightly below those for sovereigns.

VII.—The Note Circulation.

Statistics of the note circulation.

* These figures represent 5 years' increase.

The figures for the net circulation exclude the value of notes held in the Reserve Treasuries. Those for the active circulation further, exclude the value of notes in all other Government Treasuries and also of notes held in the Head Offices of the Presidency Banks.

The gross circulation stood just below the 100 crore mark on the 31st March 1918, but rapidly outstripped this figure and increasing steadily month by month reached its maximum at the close of the year when it stood at a figure rather more than 50 per cent. higher than that at the commencement of the year. The average gross circulation, as in the previous year, increased by roughly one-third. More marked was the growth in the average active circulation which rose from 71,87 lakhs in 1917-18 to 1,13,84 lakhs in 1918-19 having nearly doubled in two years. The growth in the active circulation was continuous throughout the earlier part of the year, but after reaching a maximum of 1,35,39 lakhs in the months of December and January fell slightly at the close of the year when it stood at 1,33,58 lakhs. Holdings by the Presidency Banks at their Head Offices, as shown in Statement XV, were at a much lower level than in the preceding year as a result of the falling off in balances at the Banks discussed in section V.

All circles continue to show increased note circulations and, as in the past year, the Bombay circle has again recorded the largest increase with a record average gross circulation of 46·24 crores. The biggest proportional increase appears in the Cawnpore Circle where the average gross circulation more than doubled during the year. To an even greater extent than in the previous year the note requirements of Mesopotamia helped to swell the circulation of the Bombay and Karachi circles, the remittances of notes to Basra amounting to 7,62 lakhs. The figures for the circulation of five and ten rupee notes in Mesopotamia on 31st December 1918 were 1,86 and 5,35 lakhs respectively.

37. The following statement shows by circles the number of notes of each denomination (excluding the Rs. 10,000 note) in circulation on the 31st December in each of the last three years for each 10,000 of the population :— Character of the note circulation.

A marked characteristic of recent years has been the increase in the circulation of all the universal notes. During the year under report for notes of each denomination the increase was not only maintained, but was very largely accelerated. The very rapid growth of the circulation of notes of the one rupee denomination and the comparative unpopularity of the Rs. 2-8 issue are a noticeable feature. For both these denominations it should be explained that the circle distribution shown in the table does not accurately represent the actual circulation of the notes within the circles owing to the fact that registration of these notes by circles was discontinued in November 1918. The one-rupee note was largely used in connection with the financing of the jute and cotton crops. Provided that there is adequate provision of small change, the experience of the year would seem to indicate that there is a field for the development of this denomination of note. One other feature which calls for comment is the high circulation of each denomination of notes in proportion to population shown by the Karachi circle. This is apparently an illustration of the much greater use to which notes are put in commercial centres like Karachi than in rural tracts which provide a larger percentage of the population of other circles.

Encashment at Treasuries.

38. The usual statement giving the classification of Treasuries according to the encashment of notes has been omitted as facilities for cashing notes were necessarily largely curtailed during the year and could be given only in a spasmodic and limited manner. This appears from the statistics of transactions at Treasuries given in the statement which follows where a very considerable decrease in the exchange of notes for silver and vice versâ is recorded. The growing employment of notes for the discharge of dues to and by Government commented on in last year's report is an even more marked feature of the figures for the year 1918-19.

The ratio of circulation to cancellation (taken to two places of decimal) is a rough measure of the life of each denomination. In considering these figures, however, it should be borne in mind that with a rapidly growing circulation the life so arrived at tends to be in excess of the actual life of the note.

VIII.—Miscellaneous matters connected with Currency Notes and Coinage.

40. In the year 1917-18 a large increase occurred in the number of forged notes received in the Currency Offices, the aggregate being 396 against 96 and 97 in the two previous years. In the year 1918-19 the number of forged notes received was almost three times that in the previous year amounting to 1,174. The majority of these, no less in fact than 842, were five-rupee note forgeries of the $\frac{YB}{34}$, $\frac{LC}{60}$ and $\frac{LC}{61}$ series, which were specially referred to in last year's report. Notes of these series were received during the year in all our Currency Offices, but the majority were received at Calcutta where the number was 710. It is satisfactory to note that since the close of the year a case has been instituted against a gang in connection with the forgeries of these series which has resulted in the conviction of one man with a sentence of ten years rigorous imprisonment. Full details of the case are not yet to hand. Note forgeries.

New forgeries occurred during the year, but none of these exhibited features of any particular interest. In Madras no less than 22 forged notes of the five-rupee series $\frac{BD}{2}$ occurred and in Cawnpore 11 new forgeries of the hundred rupee series $\frac{FC}{3}$ were received. It is satisfactory that in connection with these last notes four prosecutions were successfully instituted. In addition to these prosecutions there were two successful prosecutions in Calcutta, but otherwise such cases as were instituted were unsuccessful; no less than six cases brought into Court in Burma failed.

Forgeries of two-and-a-half-rupee notes were scarce. Those of the one-rupee notes were more common and were specially so in Rangoon where as many as 82 were presented. These were a new forgery printed from metal blocks on ordinary paper with imitation water marks.

41. The figures below show the number of wholly destroyed, half and mutilated notes claims in respect of which were admitted during the year 1918-19 and the three preceding years:— Claims on lost notes, etc.

* The anomaly of a minus sign is due to the procedure under which foreign circle notes held in currency chests are treated as home notes for the purpose of the currency accounts. The foreign notes of the R50 denominations held on the 31st March in the currency chests of the Madras circle where the minus sign occurs and thus temporarily withdrawn from circulation exceeded the total of the notes of these denominations in the circle in circulation.

petroleum.

The customs duty figures are an index to the volume of the import trade only, since under exports hides and skins (raw), jute, rice, and tea only are subject to duty. In the eight months ended November, 1919, the import duties increased to about R8,90 lakhs from nearly R8,20 lakhs in the same period of 1918, while the export duties rose to R2,92 lakhs from over R2,57 lakhs. The grand total of gross Indian sea and land customs revenue (excluding salt revenue) in the eight months, April to November, 1919, amounted to about R13,09 lakhs, as compared with nearly R11,97 lakhs in the corresponding period of the preceding year.

SHIPPING.

The following table shows the number and tonnage (net register tonnage) of vessels which entered and cleared with cargoes at ports in British India during November, 1919, as compared with October, 1919, and November, 1918 and 1913 :—

Entered with cargoes.

November, 1913 (pre-war month)	228	643,235	39	3,608	267	646,843

The total tonnage entered and cleared with cargoes in November, 1919, as compared with that in the preceding month (October, 1919) and in the corresponding month of 1913 and 1918, is shown in the last column of the table above. In the month of November, 1919, there were 334 arrivals* and 352 sailings† with cargoes in and from India. As regards tonnage, if a comparison be made with November, 1913, the corresponding pre-war month, it will be seen that there was a decrease in the tonnage of vessels cleared with cargoes of 62,560 tons or 10 per cent. The decrease in the entries (with cargoes) amounted to 112,151 tons or 19 per cent.

The shipping clearances with cargoes in the foreign trade from the ports of British India in the eight months, April to November, 1919, as compared with the corresponding period of 1913, i.e., before the war broke out, were as follows :—

	TONNAGE (NET REGISTER TONNAGE) CLEARANCES IN THE EIGHT MONTHS, APRIL TO NOVEMBER.
	1913 (Pre-war period)	1919
British ships (including British Indian)	4,188,666	3,219,902
Foreign ships	1,202,042	600,796
TOTAL	5,390,708	3,820,698

In 1919, as against 1913, the total tonnage clearances with cargoes declined 29 per cent. In 1913 the British (including British Indian) tonnage was 78 per cent and foreign tonnage 22 per cent of the total, while in 1919 the British (including British Indian) tonnage was 84 per cent and foreign tonnage 16 per cent.

* The details were as follows :—Bengal 37, Bombay 113, Sind 96, Madras 66, and Burma 22.
† The details were as follows :— Bengal 71, Bombay 82, Sind 70, Madras 82, and Burma 47.

RAILWAY STATISTICS.

Railway statistics, like the import and export statistics above, are a valuable index to the general movement of trade throughout the country, and show that the earnings from 1st April to 29th November, 1919, were R56,33 lakhs, as against R56,21 lakhs in the corresponding period of 1918, or an increase of R12 lakhs.

TRADE OF ADEN IN NOVEMBER, 1919.

The grand total value of the imports and exports of merchandise, by sea, into and from the port of Aden amounted to R1,77 lakhs in the month of November, and R12,26 lakhs in the eight months ended November, 1919. The value of the principal articles of import and export was as follows:—

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA

CALCUTTA, DECEMBER 30, 1919

First Forecast WINTER OILSEEDS (Rape, Mustard, and Linseed) 1919-20

THIS forecast is based on reports received from those provinces where rape, mustard, and linseed are grown to any considerable extent. These provinces contain 98·5 per cent of the total area under rape and mustard, and 99 per cent of the total linseed area in British India. Of the Indian States, estimates are furnished only for Hyderabad, Baroda and the States in the Bombay Presidency. Estimate for linseed from five Feudatory States in the Central Provinces have, for the first time, been received this year. No report is made by any other Indian State. Weather conditions have, on the whole, been favourable for sowing, and the present condition and prospects of the crops are generally good. Rain is urgently wanted in the Punjab and the United Provinces.

I

The total estimated area under rape and mustard reported up to date is 3,293,000 acres (excluding the mixed crop* of the United Provinces for which no estimate is made at this stage). This is 11 per cent above the revised area at this time last year. As compared with the final estimate of last year (excluding the mixed crop of the United Provinces), the present estimate shows an increase of 10 per cent. The detailed figures for the provinces are :—

The following is a summary of the provincial reports in respect of each crop :—

I.—RAPE AND MUSTARD

United Provinces (39·6 per cent of the total area under rape and mustard in British India).—The area sown with the unmixed rapeseed crop is estimated, on the basis of reports furnished by selected landholders, at 121,000 acres, which is 1 per cent above the area reported at this date last year. There was sufficient moisture almost everywhere for sowings, which were carried out under favourable conditions. Germination is reported to have been good and prospects are favourable. Future prospects however, depend on rains, which are now generally wanted.

Bengal (19·3 per cent of the total area under rape and mustard in British India).—The area sown is estimated at 1,097,000 acres, which is 2 per cent below the area reported at this date last year. The rainfall in September was generally in excess of the normal in north and east Bengal but was somewhat defective in west Bengal. Light rain in October facilitated the sowings of the crops, which were somewhat retarded in parts of west Bengal in early November through lack of soil moisture, but rainfall in the middle of the month greatly facilitated matters. The outlook is so far promising.

(a) Including Indian States. (b) Final figure. (c) Revised.

* The area under rape, mustard, and linseed sown interspersed with other crops, such as gram, barley, etc., in the United Provinces, is given in the final forecast published in June.

Punjab (16·5 per cent of the total area under rape and mustard in British India).—The area sown is estimated at 674,000 acres, which is 18 per cent above the area reported at this date last year. The increase is attributed to favourable weather for sowings and also to the high prices that ruled for the crop. The present condition and prospects of the crop are reported to be good on irrigated and fair on unirrigated areas. Rain is now urgently wanted.

Bihar and Orissa (11·4 per cent of the total area under rape and mustard in British India).—The area sown is at present estimated at 823,000 acres, which is 17 per cent above the area reported at this date last year. The increase is attributed to favourable weather conditions. The present condition of the crops is on the whole good in Bihar and Chota Nagpur, and fair in Orissa.

Assam (4·4 per cent of the total area under rape and mustard in British India).—The area sown is estimated at 272,000 acres, which is 1 per cent above the area reported at the corresponding date last year. The weather was good for sowing except in the northern parts of the Assam Valley where there was heavy rain in October. Since then conditions have throughout been favourable. The average outturn comes to 82 per cent of the normal according to the district estimates, but the provincial Director is of opinion that a normal crop (100 per cent) may be expected.

Bombay and Sind (5·3 per cent of the total area under rape and mustard in British India).—The area sown up to the 5th December is estimated at 159,000 acres (41,000 acres being in the Indian States), which is 46 per cent above the area reported at this date last year. Favourable inundation and good rains have extended cultivation and the condition of the crop is reported to be fairly satisfactory.

North-West Frontier Province (2 per cent of the total area under rape and mustard in British India).—The area sown up to the end of November is estimated at 109,000 acres, as compared with 47,000 acres reported at the corresponding date last year. The increase is chiefly attributed to timely rainfall and consequent flow of hill torrents at the time of sowing. The prospects of the crop are at present average on irrigated lands, but for the crops on unirrigated areas rain is deficient.

Hyderabad reports 5,000 acres under mustard, which is 17 per cent below the area reported at this time last year. The condition of the crop is satisfactory.

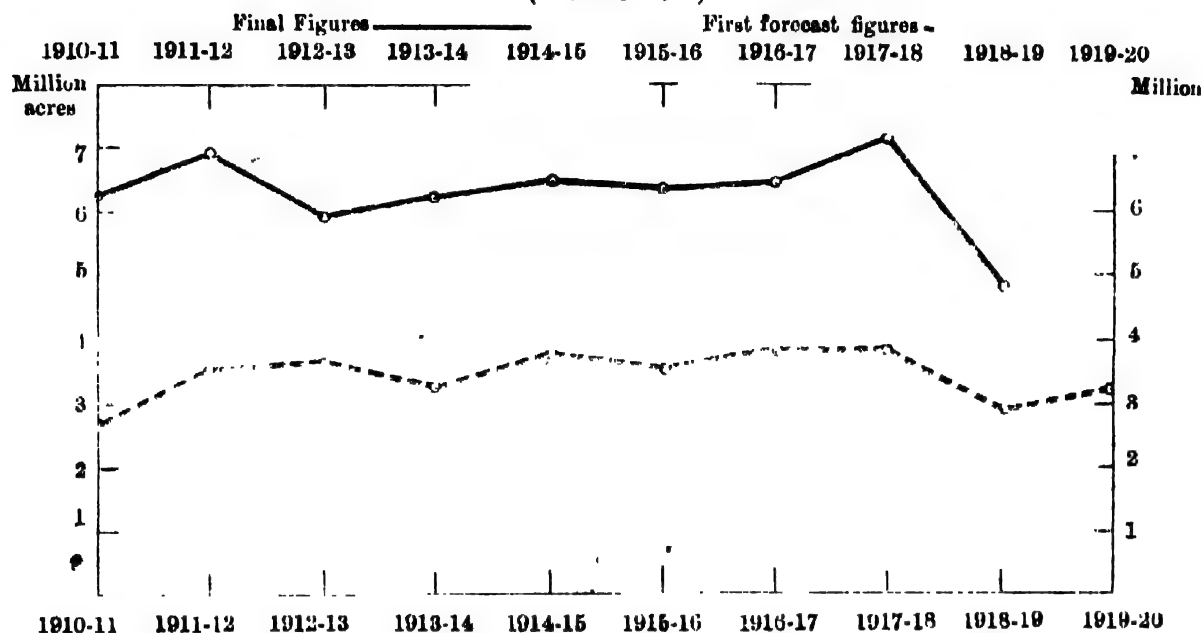
Baroda reports 33,000 acres under rape and mustard, as compared with 14,000 acres last year. Sowings were generally successful and the crop germinated well.

II.—Linseed.

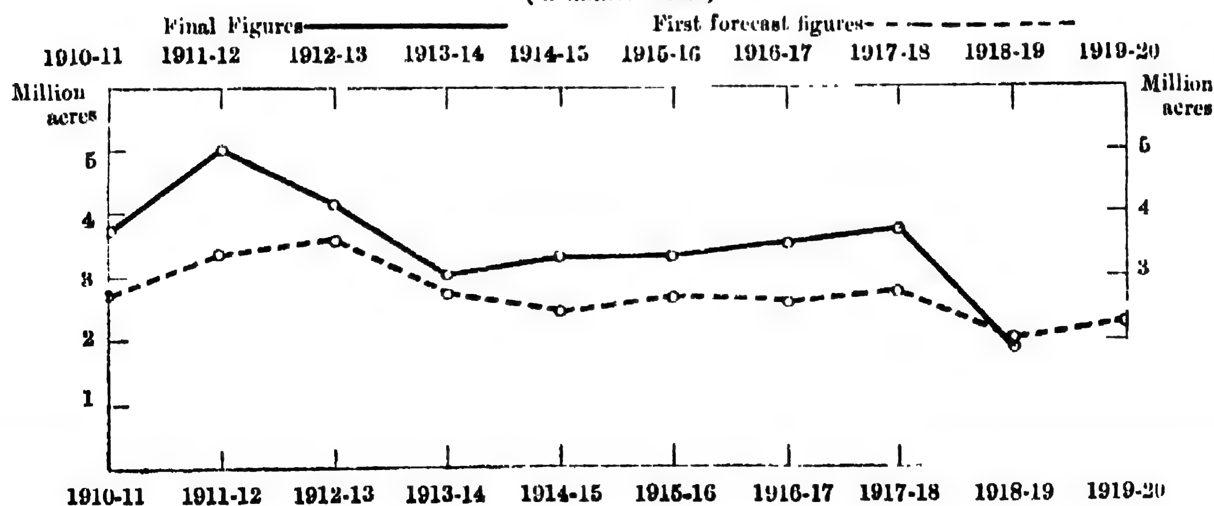
Central Provinces and Berar (36·2 per cent of the total area under linseed in British India).—The area sown is estimated at 831,000 acres (including 40,000 acres in the Feudatory States), which is 16 per cent above the area reported at the corresponding date last year. Favourable climatic conditions at sowing time, dearness of wheat seed, and high prices of linseed are the chief causes for the expansion in area. The prospects are at present excellent in Saugor and Nimar, fair in Mandla, and generally good elsewhere.

United Provinces (28·9 per cent of the total area under linseed in British India).—On the basis of the reports furnished by selected landholders, the area under unmixed linseed is at present estimated at 175,000 acres, which is 17 per cent less than the area estimated at this date last year. The figure reported at this date last year was, however, an over-estimate. As compared with the actual area of last year, the present estimate shows an increase of 154 per cent. There was sufficient moisture almost everywhere for the sowings of the crop which were generally carried out under favourable conditions. Germination was good and prospects are favourable. Future prospects depend on rains which are now generally wanted.

Bihar and Orissa (22 per cent of the total area under linseed in British India).—The area sown is at present estimated at 699,000 acres, which is 20 per cent above the area reported at this date last year. The expansion in area is attributed to favourable weather conditions at sowing time. The present condition of the crop is on the whole good in Bihar and Chota Nagpur, and fair in Orissa.



Bengal (5·5 per cent of the total area under linseed in British India).—The area under linseed is estimated at 145,000 acres, as compared with 141,000 acres estimated at this date last year. The rainfall in September was generally in excess of the normal in north and east Bengal but was somewhat defective in west Bengal. Light rain in October facilitated the sowings of the crops, which were somewhat retarded in parts of west Bengal in early November; but rainfall in the middle of that month greatly facilitated matters. The outlook is so far promising.



Bombay (5·2 per cent of the total area under linseed in British India).—The area sown up to the 5th December is estimated at 77,000 acres (10,000 acres being in the Indian States), which is 88 per cent above the area reported at this date last year. The increase is attributed to favourable late rains. The crop is doing well everywhere except in parts of Sholapur and Ahmednagar and a few places in the Karnatak, where it suffered from deficiency of moisture. Later rains, however, improved the condition. In the Deccan and the Karnatak sowings were delayed owing to heavy rains in September and are still going on in places.

Punjab (1·2 per cent of the total area under linseed in British India).—The area sown is estimated at 32,000 acres, which is 10 per cent above the estimate at this date last year. The present condition and prospects of the crop are reported to be good on irrigated and fair on unirrigated area. Rain is urgently wanted.

Hyderabad.—The area under linseed is estimated at 286,000 acres, which is 9 per cent below that reported at this date last year. The condition of the crop is reported to be satisfactory.

Chart.—The charts below illustrate the variations in the preliminary estimates of acreage, as compared with those in the final estimates, for all the reporting provinces, in respect of each crop :—

Oilseeds crops in foreign countries.—The latest information published by the International Institute of Agriculture, Rome, shows that the estimates of the linseed crop of 1919 in the United States of America are 1,850,000 acres and 286,000 tons, as compared with 1,937,000 acres and 394,000 tons in the preceding year. The estimates for the Canadian crop of linseed are 1,069,000 acres and 198,000 tons, as against 1,068,000 acres and 163,000 tons in 1918.

From unofficial sources it appears that the yield of the North American linseed crop is disappointing owing to the unfavourable weather at the growing time. The yield of the Argentine crop is reported to be 1,075,000 tons.

Provided that nothing in this notification shall apply to acetylene in admixture with air when such admixture takes place only in a burner or contrivance in which the mixture is intended to be burnt :

Provided also that nothing in this notification shall be held to apply to an admixture of acetylene and air which may unavoidably occur in the first use or re-charging of an apparatus properly designed and constructed with a view to the production of pure acetylene :

Provided also that acetylene, when in admixture with oil-gas (that is to say, a gas manufactured from mineral oil), shall not when under compression be deemed to be an explosive within the meaning of the said Act as applied, if the following conditions are fulfilled, namely :—

(1) The acetylene shall be generated only by the Atkins Dry Process.

(3) The acetylene and oil-gas shall be mixed together in a chamber or vessel before the gases are subjected to compression

(4) The mixture shall not be compressed to a pressure exceeding one hundred and fifty pounds to one square inch.

(3) Any acetone or other solvent used shall not be capable of chemical reaction with the acetylene gas or with the porous substance or with the metal of the cylinder, and the quantity of acetone or other solvent shall be such that when fully charged with acetylene it shall not completely fill the porosity of the porous substance at any temperature likely to be met with in ordinary practice or use.

(4) A drawing showing the method of construction of every type of cylinder it is proposed to use for the storage of compressed acetylene gas shall be deposited with the Chief Inspector of Explosives with the Government of India, and no cylinder shall be so used unless it is of a design approved in writing by the said Chief Inspector :

Provided that this shall not be deemed to prohibit the use of existing cylinders for a period of five years from the date of this notification.

Provided that no cylinder capable when empty of containing one cubic foot of water or more, which has the ends secured to the body by welding only, and no cylinder in which a porous substance is used without acetone or other solvent shall be charged to a pressure exceeding one hundred and fifty pounds to the square inch at a temperature of sixty degrees Fahrenheit This condition shall not apply to cylinders used exclusively for marine lighting by an officer appointed by a Local Government in that behalf.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty north of Shargat on 30th October, 1918. When advancing to cut off a body of the enemy, heavy fire was suddenly opened on his squadron. He thereupon immediately attacked the enemy with great daring, causing the surrender of 200, including 25 officers and several machine guns. He did fine work.

(D. S. O. gazetted 25th August, 1917.)

* * * * *

AWARDED THE DISTINGUISHED SERVICE ORDER.

* * * *

Maj. Thomas William Slingsby, 22nd Cav., I.A. (Mesopotamia.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at Tuz Khurmatli on 29th April, 1918. He boldly led his squadron at a gallop against two guns, which he captured, and going through them, charged to the top of the ridge and caused the enemy to surrender.

* * * * *

AWARDED THE MILITARY CROSS.

* * * * *

Lt. (A./Capt.) John Waugh Davidson, 12th Cavalry, I.A. (Mesopotamia.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at Tauq on 18th October, 1918. He reconnoitred a route through unsurveyed hills and guided the regiment successfully round the enemy's outposts to seize a stone bridge over a river, forestalling the enemy by a few minutes. Subsequently he led his squadron with great dash in the attack, and pursued and captured over 20 prisoners

* * * * *

Lt. Charles James Stewart Fraser, 54 Sikhs, I.A., attd. 1st Corps Signal Company. (Mesopotamia.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty, near Huwaish, on 27th and 28th October, 1918. He was in command of a cable section and maintained communication over very broken country with great skill and resource. During the operations he had to keep touch with a column operating practically in rear of the enemy, but in spite of all difficulties and heavy fire, he never once failed in keeping the line intact. His assistance throughout proved invaluable.

*   *   *   *   *

Lt. (A./Capt. Duncan St. Vincent Gordon, 39th C. I. Horse, attd. 12th Cavalry, I.A. (Mesopotamia.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty near Altun Keupri on 27th October, 1918. He reconnoitred towards a town under fire, driving in the hostile cavalry outposts and causing the enemy to disclose his infantry and gun positions so that they could be shelled by our artillery. He skilfully performed the same task later, and throughout the operations handled his squadron with cool judgment.

*   *   *   *   *

Lt. Walter Scott Hogg Hearn, 34th Poona Horse Cav., I.A. (Egypt.)

For the skilful handling of his squadron in an attack on a body of the enemy, south of Daraya, near Damascus, on the morning of the 1st October, 1918. When acting as a flank guard to the regiment, he, by his clever use of ground and Hotchkiss rifles, combined with the speed with which he carried out his mounted attack, succeeded in capturing 270 prisoners without incurring any casualties. He did fine work.

*   *   *   *   *

Risaldar (A./Risaldar-Maj.) Kishan Singh, 22nd Cav., I.A. (Mesopotamia.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at Tuz Khurmatli, on 29th April, 1918. When his squadron was ordered to charge the enemy's position he was the first man to reach the objective, and by his courage and able leadership his troops captured 300 of the enemy and two field guns. He has at all times displayed coolness and determination, and set a fine example to the regiment.

*   *   *   *   *

Lt. Neville Edward Marriott, 25th attd. 23rd Cavalry, I.A. (Mesopotamia.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty near Huwaish on 27th October, 1918. When his squadron was in action within 100 yards of the enemy his squadron leader was dangerously wounded; shortly afterwards the squadron had to withdraw. Lt. Marriott, accompanied by two men, then went back, under heavy fire, and carried his squadron leader to safety. His fine action undoubtedly saved his squadron leader's life.

*   *   *   *   *

Capt. James Farquhar White Ogilvie, Corps of Guides (Cavalry), I.A. (Mesopotamia.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty near Huwaish on 28th and 29th October, 1918. He commanded his squadron with great ability and coolness in the defence of a position which was repeatedly attacked by superior enemy forces. Although many of his men became casualties, and his line was weakly held, he beat off all attempts by the enemy to break through and maintained his position. His conduct throughout was splendid.

*   *   *   *   *

Lt. John Claude Thurlow Rivett-Carnac, I.A.R.O., attd. 13th Lrs. (Mesopotamia.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty on 24th October, 1918. He pushed forward with great determination to reconnoitre the Zab river, which he succeeded in crossing. He then established his patrol in some old enemy trenches overlooking the river, and with their assistance, captured one officer and several men and horses. As hostile patrols were eventually working round his flanks, he was forced to withdraw, bringing back his prisoners and rendering a valuable report as to the enemy's dispositions, and the crossing over the river.

*   *   *   *   *

Lt. Egerton Charles Spencer, I.A., attd. 34th Poona Horse. (Egypt.)

For conspicuous gallantry on 28th September, 1918. When in command of the vanguard troop in an attack on a hostile column resulting in the capture of 300 prisoners, seven lorries and motor cars. Seeing that the advance of his troop was threatened by four enemy firing rifles at close range from a car, he charged them single-handed and drove them off. He showed a very fine example of initiative and dash.

*   *   *   *   *

Risaldar-Maj. Sundar Singh, 21st Cav., I.A. (Mesopotamia.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at Kirkuk on 6th May, 1918. He was sent forward with a patrol to verify a report that the enemy was retiring. He came under heavy fire from front and flank, but with great skill and coolness manœuvred his patrol into a hollow whence he made a close personal reconnaissance and rendered a report on the enemy's dispositions which proved invaluable.

* * * * *

Subadar-Major Tulsiram Gharti, 1/2nd Gurkha Rifles, I.A. (Mesopotamia.)

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty at Resht, on 20th July, 1918. During an attack by the enemy on a town, he led his men with exceptional ability and dash, and by the rapidity of his advance, inflicted heavy casualties on the enemy, taking a number of prisoners. Later, he displayed marked initiative and daring in the relief of a beseiged garrison. His conduct throughout the operations was splendid.

Burma.—The week was rainless. Reaping of winter rice is progressing. Threshing and winnowing are becoming general in Upper Burma. Sowings of tobacco, onions and cultivation of spring rice and miscellaneous winter crops are proceeding normally. Reaping of late sesamum and gathering of groundnuts are nearing completion. The outturn of rice crops is not likely to exceed by about twelve annas. Island crops are promising. Cattle are generally healthy. In the Amherst district the number of persons on relief works remains unchanged at 2,700. The number of persons receiving gratuitous relief was about 100. The price of unhusked rice remains stationary and much above normal and is about Rs. 7 below the control price. The market for white rice (specials) is unchanged at Rs. 145.

Assam.—During the week the weather was seasonable and favourable. Harvesting of winter rice and pulses, picking of cotton, ploughing for and transplanting of spring rice crops in Sylhet and pressing of sugarcane are in progress. Ploughing for autumn rice and jute has commenced in places. The outturn of winter rice and pulses is fair to good. Cotton and sugarcane are in good condition. Prospects of mustard are fair. Cattle disease is reported from two districts. The price of common rice is practically stationary.

Bengal.—The week was rainless. Harvesting of winter paddy is nearly over. Prospects of standing crops are generally good. The average price of common rice has risen by 9·65 per cent.

Bihar and Orissa.—There was no rain during the week. Harvesting of paddy is nearly finished. Threshing of paddy and pressing of sugarcane continue. Standing crops are, on the whole, doing well. More rain is wanted in parts of Tirhut and Bhagalpur. The price of common rice has risen in eight districts, fallen in two and remained stationary in the remaining districts. The average price of local common rice at headquarters was 6·45 seers a rupee against 6·56 seers in the preceding week and that of maize was 7·33 seers against 7·48 seers of the preceding week. Cattle disease is reported from six districts. The condition of standing crops in the Feudatory States of Orissa and Chota Nagpur is good.

United Provinces.—The rainfall during the week was insignificant. Preparation of lands for sugarcane and extra crops, irrigation of spring crops and poppy and pressing of sugarcane continue. Standing crops are doing well. Prospects are favourable. The condition of agricultural stock is satisfactory. Fodder, water and market supplies are sufficient. Prices are generally stationary.

Punjab.—During the week light rain fell in parts of all the reporting districts and was beneficial to standing crops which are generally good on irrigated and average on unirrigated areas. Picking of cotton, pressing of sugarcane and harvesting of toria are in progress. The yield is below normal to normal. Sowings of spring crops have been nearly completed and are generally normal. Cattle are healthy and fodder and water are generally sufficient. Prices are generally stationary and above scarcity rates. North-West Frontier Province.—During the week beneficial rain fell throughout the province. Sowings of spring crops and harvesting of certain autumn crops are in progress. The condition of standing crops and the outturn of sugarcane are generally average. Wheat:—Peshawar 7$\frac{3}{16}$ and Dera Ismail Khan 6¼ seers per rupee.

Jammu.—During the week no rain fell. There was no perceptible fall in prices. Fodder sufficient.

Kashmir.—During the week the weather was snowy and cold. Cattle disease in Gurez is subsided. Prices are fluctuating.

Rajputana.—During the week rain fell in the centres of Tonk, Partabgarh, Banswara, Karauli, Kotah and Jhalawar. The weather was cool and cloudy. Crops are being irrigated and are in good condition. Prospects are good. The condition of agricultural stock is good, except in one district of Kotah. Water and fodder are sufficient. Prices are generally steady.

Central India.—The rainfall during the week was partial except in Bundelkhand where the rain is badly wanted. Harvesting of autumn crops continues in Bhopal, Malwa and the Southern States. Picking of cotton continues in Gwalior, Indore, Bhopal and the Southern States. Pressing of sugarcane has been commenced in Gwalior. Standing crops with their probable outturn are fair to good. Agricultural stock is generally good except for cattle disease in Gwalior, Baghelkhand and the Southern States. Prices are high. Opium is being weeded in Gwalior and Indore.

Central Provinces.—During the week the weather continues to be cool with occasional clouds. Twelve districts received rain ranging from 22 cents in Narsingpur to 3¼ inches in Chhindwara. Harvesting, threshing and winnowing of autumn crops and picking of cotton still continue. Spring crops are in excellent condition and prospects are good. Agricultural stock is good, but disease prevails in parts of eleven districts. Fodder and water are ample. Prices remained steady or fluctuating slightly with an upward tendency.

Feudatory States :—Spring crops are in flourishing condition.

Bombay.—Rain fell during the week in most parts of Presidency proper, the fall was slightly injurious to cotton in Gujarat, Rewa Kantha and to certain crops in parts of Surat, Broach, Kaira, West Khandesh and Kathiawar but beneficial to late crops in parts of the Panch Mahals, Broach, West Khandesh and crops are generally in good condition elsewhere except in parts of Karachi and Bijapur where they were slightly damaged by insects and in parts of Poona and Sholapur where they are withering. COTTON PRESS RETURN.

No. 6 of 1919-20.

PREFATORY NOTE.

The Cotton Season, 1919-20.

The provisional estimate of the cotton crop of 1919-20 is 5,670,000 bales* on an area of 22,199,000 acres,* as compared with 3,671,000 bales on an area of 20,497,000 acres, the final estimates of last year. There is an increase of 54 per cent in the outturn. There were 410,000 bales of cotton pressed in the pressing factories, and 92,000 bales of unpressed cotton received in the spinning mills, from 1st September to 30th November, 1919, as against 229,000 bales and 76,000 bales, respectively, during the corresponding period of last year, showing an increase of 79 per cent in the case of presses, and of 21 per cent in the case of mills. Too much stress should not be laid on the accuracy of these returns as a means of checking the forecast estimates of outturn, as there is at present no system in vogue of furnishing complete returns from all presses and mills. The figures for the Indian States of Hyderabad, Baroda, Central India, Rajputana, and Mysore are, as will be seen from the footnotes to the tables, mostly incomplete, and have been excluded from this comparison.

*Revised after the issue of the Third Cotton Forecast, 1919-20 on 23rd December 1919.

URGENT ORDERS.

In the event of an applicant being promised a licence he will be enabled to deal with the order straightaway with the knowledge that upon application being made on the proper form to the Export Licence Department the licence will be granted.

The telegrams should be addressed to "Orders, c/o Advantage, Stock, London." They should give in each case, in addition to the name and postal or telegraphic address of the applicant, the quantity and description of the goods comprised in the order and the name and address of the ultimate consignee if the goods are destined for a neutral country. In the case of orders from Allied or British Territory or from Territory in the occupation of troops of the Associated Governments, the consignee need not be stated; and it will be sufficient merely to give the country of destination. A reply of 24 words (½) must be prepaid.

Applicants are requested in their own interest to confine their enquiries to orders needing a very urgent decision, since the fewer the enquiries the more promptly can answers be given.

Sanitary Commissioner with the Government of India.

No. 26-A.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

FINANCE DEPARTMENT.

Delhi, the 13th January 1920.

FACILITIES FOR MAKING PAYMENTS AT GOVERNMENT TREASURIES BY CHEQUE INSTEAD OF IN CASH.

RESOLUTION.

The Government of India have been considering whether the time has not come for extending the facilities given to the public for making payments at Government treasuries by cheque instead of in cash. Such facilities already exist in varying degrees in certain centres, and the Government of India consider that they may now be usefully extended. They have accordingly decided that at places where the treasury business is conducted by a branch of one of the Presidency Banks, cheques on banks which have clearing accounts with the Presidency Banks shall be accepted in payment of Government dues or in settlement of other transactions. Until, however, a cheque has been cleared Government cannot admit that payment has been received, and consequently it will not be possible to grant final receipts for payment at the time when a cheque is tendered. It has therefore been arranged, as will be seen from the annexure to this Resolution, that a receipt for the actual cheque only will be given in the first instance, but, if the person making payment in this manner so desires, a formal payment receipt will be forwarded to him on the cheque being cleared. In the event of a cheque being dishonoured the fact will be intimated to the tenderer as soon as possible, but Government cannot accept any liability for loss or damage which may possibly occur as a result of delay in intimating that the cheque has been dishonoured.

2. Certain special arrangements will be necessary when Government dues which have to be paid by certain fixed dates are paid by cheque, and persons desiring to make such payments in this manner without risk must take precautions to ensure that their cheques reach the treasury at the latest on the day before the date on which the payment is to be made. Cheques received on the last day of payment of Government dues will be liable to be refused.

3. The detailed procedure which will be followed is described in the annexure to this Resolution.

Ordered that the Resolution be published in the Gazette of India.

E. M. COOK,

Secretary to the Government of India.

ANNEXURE TO RESOLUTION No. 26-A., DATED THE 13TH JANUARY 1920.

Procedure for acceptance of cheques at treasuries where the treasury work is conducted by a Presidency Bank or one of its branches.

(1) Cheques on banks which the Presidency Banks will accept will alone be accepted at treasuries.

(2) The cheques must be crossed in all cases.

(3) There will be a daily clearance and transactions will be included in the daily sheet submitted by the bank to the treasury.

(4) A receipt will be granted in the form below in respect of a cheque on its presentation, but in case the payer also wishes to have a final-receipt he should leave instructions to that effect at the time of the presentation of the cheque and the final receipt will be sent by post to his address after the cheque has been cashed.

"Received Cheque No ....

.... for Rupees ....drawn on .... bank on account of / as per challan No. ....".

(5) If a cheque is dishonoured by the bank on its presentation, the fact will be reported at once to the payer with a demand for payment in cash.

(6) Cheques in payment of Government dues, which have to be paid into the treasury by a certain date at the latest, will not be accepted at the treasury if presented later than the day previous to such date.

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA.

TRADE FLUCTUATIONS IN SELECTED ARTICLES IN NOVEMBER, 1919.

The object of the tables appended is to show the quantities of the principal staples of agricultural produce imported from the various provinces and Indian States and from foreign countries into the ports of Calcutta, Bombay, and Karachi, and into the Madras ports during the month of November, 1919, and for the eight months, April to November, 1919, as compared with the corresponding periods of 1918. The statistics include sea-borne foreign and coasting trade as well as inland (rail and river-borne) trade. They have been furnished by Collectors of Customs, Steamer Companies, Railway Audit Officers, and the Commissioners for the Port of Calcutta.

TRADE FLUCTUATIONS IN NOVEMBER, 1918 AND 1919.

It will be seen from Table I that the imports by rail, river, and sea in November, 1919, as against the corresponding month of 1918, show (in round numbers) an increase of—

45 per cent in raw cotton
(244,700 bales as against 168,600 bales last year),

23 per cent in tea
(36,346,600 lbs as against 29,432,500 lbs last year),

18 per cent in jute
(656,100 bales as against 554,600 bales last year), and

4 per cent in wheat (excluding wheat flour)
(37,900 tons as against 36,500 tons last year).

There was a fall of 94 per cent in the imports of linseed (3,900 tons as against 61,200 tons last year) on account of smaller exports from Bihar and Orissa, the United Provinces, the Central Provinces and Berar, and Rajputana and Central India. The imports of rape and mustard seed show a decrease of 54 per cent (5,300 tons as against 11,600 tons last year), due mainly to smaller exports from Bombay and the Punjab. The decrease of 37 per cent (67,200 tons as against 106,900 tons last year) in the imports of rice (including paddy) is accounted for by smaller exports from Bengal and Madras. The imports of gram and pulse represent a decrease of 6 per cent (32,300 tons as against 34,300 tons last year) owing to smaller exports mainly from the Punjab.

It will be seen from Table IV (wheat, excluding wheat flour) that the principal source of the imports in November, 1918, was the Punjab (61 per cent of the total). During November, 1919 also, the principal source of the imports was the Punjab (62 per cent of the total). Table XI shows the exports from India by sea of wheat (including wheat flour) month by month during the six years, 1913-14 to 1918-19, and for the eight months, April to November, 1919.

NOTE.—(1) One bale of cotton or jute is equivalent to 400 lbs.
(2) One maund is equivalent to 82⅐ lbs.
(3) One maund of paddy is taken as equivalent to 25 seers of rice.

GENERAL RESULTS—EIGHT MONTHS' IMPORTS INTO THE PORTS BY RAIL, RIVER AND SEA THIS YEAR AND LAST YEAR.

The eight months' figures in table I show (in round numbers) a decrease of—

55 per cent in gram and pulse
(279,400 tons as against 616,400 tons last year),
54 per cent in wheat (excluding wheat flour)
(351,400 tons as against 771,000 tons last year),
27 per cent in linseed
(185,100 tons as against 251,900 tons last year),
12 per cent in rape and mustard seed
(77,900 tons as against 88,600 tons last year), and
2 per cent in tea
(191,693,900 lbs as against 196,501,500 lbs last year).

The imports of rice (including paddy) by rail, river, and sea into ports show an increase of 49 per cent (1,030,300 tons as against 690,100 tons last year) mainly on account of larger shipments from Burma. The increase of 10 per cent (1,720,500 bales as against 1,566,800 bales last year) in raw cotton is accounted for by larger receipts chiefly from the Central Provinces and Berar, Rajputana and Central India, Sind and British Baluchistan, the Nizam's Territory, and the Punjab, in spite of heavy decreases from Bombay and non-British ports in India. The imports of jute show a rise of 1 per cent (3,515,400 bales as against 3,465,800 bales last year) owing to larger exports, principally from Bengal.

TRADE FLUCTUATIONS IN NOVEMBER, 1919, AS COMPARED WITH THE PREVIOUS MONTH.

As compared with October, 1919, the imports in November, 1919, into the ports referred to above show (in round numbers) an increase of—

233 per cent in raw cotton
(241,700 bales as against 72,500 bales previous month),
113 per cent in linseed
(3,900 tons as against 1,800 tons previous month),
65 per cent in gram and pulse
(32,300 tons as against 19,500 tons previous month),
54 per cent in wheat (excluding wheat flour)
(37,900 tons as against 24,600 tons previous month), and
53 per cent in rape and mustard seed
(5,300 tons as against 3,500 tons previous month),

and a decrease of—

59 per cent in rice (including paddy)
(67,200 tons as against 162,400 tons previous month),
17 per cent in tea
(36,346,600 lbs as against 43,651,800 lbs previous month), and
13 per cent in jute
(656,100 bales as against 749,300 bales previous month)

The statistics for November, 1918 and 1919, as also for the eight months ending November, 1918 and 1919, together with those for October and November, 1919, are summarised below :—

COTTON PRESS RETURN.

No. 7 of 1919-20.

PREFATORY NOTE.

The Cotton Season, 1919-20.

The provisional estimate of the cotton crop of 1919-20 is 5,670,000 bales* on an area of 22,199,000 acres,* as compared with 3,671,000 bales on an area of 20,497,000 acres, the final estimates of last year. There is an increase of 54 per cent in the outturn. The estimate for British provinces (including States within provincial boundaries) is 4,347,000 bales, an increase of 56 per cent over last year's figures. There were 609,000 bales of cotton pressed in the pressing factories, and 122,000 bales of unpressed cotton received in the spinning mills in British provinces, from 1st September to 15th December, 1919, as against 363,000 bales and 104,000 bales, respectively, during the corresponding period of last year, showing an increase of 68 per cent in the case of presses, and of 17 per cent in the case of mills. Too much stress should not be laid on the accuracy of these returns as a means of checking the forecast estimates of outturn, as there is at present no system in vogue of furnishing complete returns from all presses and mills. The figures for the Indian States of Hyderabad, Baroda, Central India, Rajputana, and Mysore are, as will be seen from the footnotes to the tables, mostly incomplete, and have been excluded from this comparison.

*Revised after the issue of the Third Cotton Forecast, 1919-20, on the 23rd December 1919.

FOREIGN SEA-BORNE TRADE.

RETURN, with a prefatory note, showing the IMPORTS and EXPORTS OF MERCHANDISE (i.e., EXCLUSIVE of TREASURE and GOVERNMENT STORES) by SEA from and to the PRINCIPAL COUNTRIES in the SIX MONTHS, APRIL to SEPTEMBER, 1919, AS COMPARED with the CORRESPONDING PERIOD of the PREVIOUS YEAR.

PREFATORY NOTE.

The returns of Indian Imports and Exports, including Re-exports, of merchandise (exclusive of Treasure and Government stores) by sea during the six months, April to September, 1919, show a trade balance (excluding treasure) in favour of India of over R62 crores, or over 46 per cent above that of the corresponding period of the previous year. In the six months, April to September, 1918, the corresponding balance in favour of India was nearly R43 crores.

India's Balance of Trade in the six months, April to September, 1917, 1918, and 1919, was as follows:—

The balance of trade, so far as shown by the statistics of merchandise, treasure, Council Bills, and Enfaced Rupee paper, was R40,84 lakhs in favour of India in the six months ended September, 1919, as against R14,15 lakhs in the same period of 1918; while in the corresponding period of 1917 the balance was against India to the extent of R2,54 lakhs.

The total exports of Indian merchandise only, in the six months ended September 1919, amounted to nearly R141 crores, of which nearly R64 crores went to ports within the British Empire and R77 crores to ports outside the Empire. The United Kingdom took 31 per cent of the exports, followed by the United States 19 per cent, Japan 13 per cent, France 5 per cent, and Italy 2 per cent. During the same period there were imported into India goods of the value of R88 crores. Goods worth R51 crores were sent from ports within the Empire, the United Kingdom alone accounting for R40 crores, or 45 per cent of the total. The principal exporter to India, next to the United Kingdom was the United States, which exported goods to the value of R14 crores (16 per cent), Japan was the third largest exporter with 10 per cent, and Java the fourth with 8 per cent.

The following figures showing India's trade† with the British Empire and Foreign countries during the six months (April to September) of the years 1917, 1918, and 1919, are interesting:—

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA

CALCUTTA, JANUARY 15, 1920.

Final General Memorandum on the SESAMUM (til or jinjili) Crop of 1919-20.

THIS memorandum is based on reports received from provinces which contain, on an average, 76 per cent* of the total area under sesamum in British India. Of the Indian States, estimates are furnished by Hyderabad, Baroda, and the States in the Bombay Presidency. Returns have been received from the Orissa and Chota Nagpur Feudatory States for the first time this year. The present estimates are final for all the provinces and States, except Madras and Hyderabad. A supplementary memorandum will be issued in April containing the final estimates for Madras and Hyderabad.

The total area reported is 4,212,000 acres, which is 11 per cent above the revised area at this time last year. The total yield is estimated at 409,000 tons (excluding Hyderabad for which no estimate of outturn is made at this date). This is 90 per cent above the revised estimate on this date last year. The detailed figures for the provinces are :—

The condition of the crop, on the whole, is reported to be generally good.

The provincial reports are summarised below :—

United Provinces (25·1 per cent of the total area under sesamum in British India).—The area under sesamum sown unmixed is reported to be 167,000 acres, which is 19 per cent below that of last year. The decrease occurred chiefly in the Bundelkhand division where sowings were restricted owing to heavy and continuous rains in August. The yield of the unmixed crop is estimated at 17,000 tons, as compared with 8,000 tons last year. The area and yield of sesamum sown in combination with other crops and largely retained for local consumption, are roughly estimated at 975,000 acres and 98,000 tons, as against 925,000 acres and 38,000 tons last year. In Bundelkhand, the chief sesamum growing tract, the crop suffered from excessive rain in August; elsewhere it was somewhat better. For the provinces, as a whole, the crop is estimated at 80 per cent of the normal, as compared with 35 per cent last year.

Madras (16·4 per cent of the total area under sesamum in British India).—The area sown up to 1st January is estimated at 688,000 acres, as against 482,000 acres reported at this date last year, or an increase of 43 per cent, which is attributed to timely sowing rains. The total outturn is estimated at 91,000 tons, which is 54 per cent above the estimate made at this time last year. The season was of an average character. The average outturn is estimated at 97 per cent of the normal.

Central Provinces and Berar (15·1 per cent of the total area under sesamum in British India).—The area is estimated at 445,000 acres (56,000 acres being in Berar), which is 10 per cent below that of last year. The total yield is estimated at 43,000 tons (7,000 tons being in Berar), which is 26 per cent above that of last year. Heavy and continuous rains from July to September retarded sowing operations and damaged the crop to some extent in parts of several districts. The average outturn for the provinces as a whole is estimated at 93 per cent of the normal.

Bombay (5·1 per cent of the total area under sesamum in British India).—The area is reported to be 489,000 acres (334,000 acres being in the Indian States excluding Baroda), as compared with 217,000 acres last year. The extension in cultivation is attributed to favourable sowing rains; but the acreage is still considerably below the normal owing to greater attention being paid to the growth of food grains and fodder for which there was a keen demand owing to last year's scarcity. The yield is estimated at 58,000 tons (37,000 tons being in the Indian States), as against 10,000 tons last year. In north Gujarat the early crop suffered in places from heavy rains but the late crop is good. In the south it has generally done well. In the Deccan the crop did well in Khandesh; elsewhere it suffered from the long drought of July—August and in places from heavy late rains. In the east Karnatak the crop suffered from the absence of rain in July—August, but subsequent rains have improved it. It did fairly well in the west Karnatak and in the Konkan.

Bengal (4·9 per cent of the total area under sesamum in British India).—The area under both early and late crops now amounts to 210,000 acres, which is 4 per cent below that of last year. The total yield is estimated at 35,000 tons, which is 6 per cent above last year's yield. For the early crop the season was not generally favourable. For the late crop the weather at sowing time was unfavourable owing to the uneven distribution of rainfall. Subsequently conditions improved until the end of October; but continued drought since then has generally stunted the growth of the crop and considerably reduced the outturn in many districts.

* The area under sesamum in Burma is excluded. On an average this is nearly 24 per cent of the area under sesamum in British India.

(a) Including Indian States. (b) As reported last year by the Director of Agriculture, Bombay.
(c) Not yet available. (d) Less than 100 tons.

Insect-pests also caused some damage in places. The average outturn per acre is estimated at 76 per cent of the normal for the early crop, and 68 per cent for the late crop.

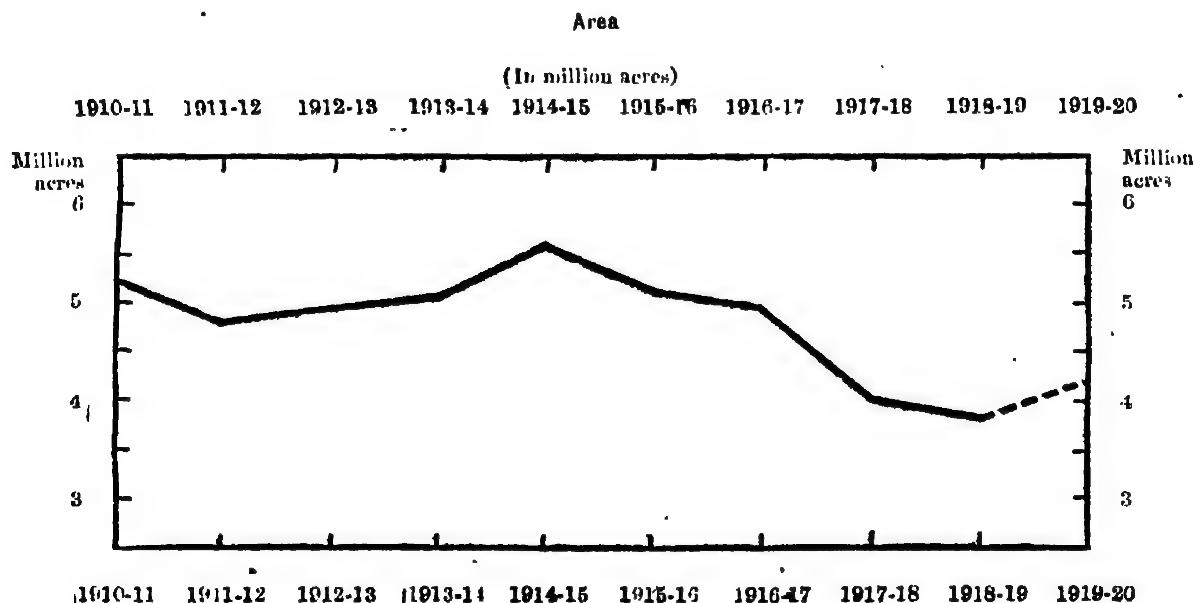
Bihar and Orissa (4·4 per cent of the total area under sesamum in British India).—The area is reported to be 485,000 acres (306,000 acres being in the Orissa and Chota Nagpur Feudatory States from which a sesamum forecast has been received for the first time this year). This is 27 per cent below the area of last year. The decrease is mainly due to the failure of the previous crop and the consequent want of seed. The total yield is estimated at 49,000 tons (20,000 tons being in the Feudatory States), which is 81 per cent above last year's yield. The weather conditions have generally been favourable.

Punjab (3·5 per cent of the total area under sesamum in British India).—The area is reported to be 110,000 acres, as against 51,000 acres last year. The increase is attributed to favourable rainfall at sowing time and better working of canals. The yield is estimated at 12,000 tons, as compared with 4,000 tons last year. The season was, on the whole, favourable.

Sind (1 per cent of the total area under sesamum in British India).—The area is estimated at 30,000 acres (1,000 acres being in the Khairpur State), as against 12,000 acres last year. The increase is attributed to good inundation and favourable early rains. The yield is estimated at 2,000 tons, which is double that of last year's yield. The crop is reported to have been affected by heavy abnormal dew.

Ajmer-Merwara (0·4 per cent of the total area under sesamum in British India).—The area and yield are reported to be 17,000 acres and 1,000 tons, as compared with 3,000 acres and 30 tons last year.

Hyderabad reports 523,000 acres, which is 4 per cent above the area reported at this date last year. The yield is estimated at 47 per cent of the normal, as against 36 per cent last year.



Baroda reports 73,000 acres under sesamum against 26,000 acres last year. The yield is estimated at 3,000 tons, as against 1,000 tons last year.

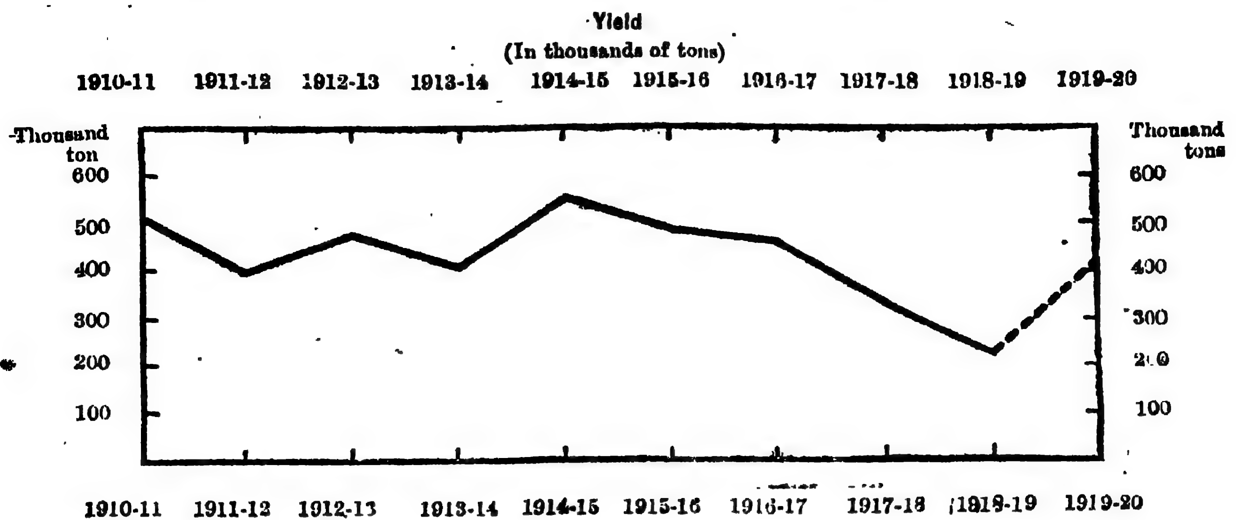


Chart.—The charts below show the present estimates of the total area and yield, as compared with the final figures of the preceding nine years:—
